A Church "At Home."

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Macleod, of Olivet Baptist church, were at home to the members of the congregation at the Olivet Church last Thursday evening.

The church, which was beautifully decorated with sweet peas, asters, and other varieties of the season's flowers, was well filled with members of the congregation. A very pleasing musical program was planned, which included vocal solos by Mrs. Macleod, Mr. P. L. Newton and Mrs. Howes.

A Thimble Tea.

Mrs. J. W. Ghenwright, of the Devonish Apartments, was the hostess at a jolly thimble tea yesterday afternoon, complimentary to her sister, Mrs. Struthers, of Winnipeg, who is visiting her.

Mrs. Ghenwright chose a becoming gown of cerise satin, the bodice veiled with ecru guipure lace; while the guest of honor wore a becoming frock of green alpaca with floral border over silk of the same hue.

Some of the guests included, Mrs. Donald Carter, Mrs. J. H. O'Brien, of the Columbia (Ohio) Dispatch, "in part lies a superior intelligence, a most thorough going sympathy with the feelings of men and a most keen analysis of certain needs in our present social order. Nothing impressed me so much in a reading of Madame Labadie's as the feeling that there is a truly great mind at work with capabilities of expression developed to a really positive degree. Her voice, with great ranges of tonal color, runs the gamut of feeling with fluency and power, and the lessons of the drama are deeply sunk in the hearts of her audience."

"She has a commanding presence, and her voice, elegantly poised, she made a charming stage picture as she held her book in the left hand and declaimed with eloquent gestures of the other arm or graceful movements about the stage. She gave the entire three acts without leaving the stage."

Robinson and Co., Eighth avenue, have some stunning models. Here more seasonable fashions are noticed. The single great velvet rose may be used as the only trimming.

Glenville's, on Eighth avenue, west, also have a variety of imported models. Fashion figures in nearly every type of dress, from the open air, to the most delicate tailored model.

Miss Waller, Eighth avenue, has endeavored to please the ladies of Calgary with her selection of hats, and she has succeeded very well, too, for here, as elsewhere, are numbers of attractive models. Big soft draped velvet or plush crowns in the Tam o' Shanter order are a feature of the season.

Prize Jokes also contribute a quantity of pretty winter hats from which the Calgary ladies can choose a "first hat," a "dress hat," or a "tailored hat." Most of the offerings are on this week.

Local Millinery Parlors

Now that the rush of the Stampede is over, one of the most important questions in the woman's realm is "What kind of a fall hat shall I get, and where shall I buy it?"

A great many customers have the idea that the best is behind the styles, but one who has visited the numerous millinery parlors in Calgary cannot help but note that we have some of the season's very prettiest, newest, up-to-date models in our local stores.

The Calgary Millinery stores, one at First street west in the Alhambra block, and another in the Bruner block, have an exceptionally fine selection of hats. Indeed, there are so many pretty models that "mildly" finds it hard to make a selection. There are the chic velvet models, the lady's silk beaver hats with their trimmings under the crowns, and the whole plush models. There are black and white hats in legions.

Some of the season's colors are the fuchsia shades, the burnt orange tones and the bright coral.

All sorts of feather novelties, such as smart bobs, cockades, ostrich feather bands, and pheasant mounts are used. The "Bride" Millinery parlors in the Bruner block have also some especially attractive imported models. One Paris hat in copper shades was very fascinating, while a white plush model with pink ostrich band and gold rose was very tempting to the buyer.

Snell's department store has also a variety of hats. Here again one notices the "French" plumes which are so stylish, the mushroom and sulphur yellow which are such modish shades in millinery this year.

Miss Patterson, on Eighth avenue, has also a large stock of fashionable hats. For their trimmings she has fur
