only for one person. Infected by the Egyptian's high spirits, Gavin had laid aside the minister with his hat, and what was left was only a young man. He who had stamped his feet at the thought of a soldier's closk now wanted to be reminded of it. The little minister, who used to address himself in terms of scorn every time he wasted an hour, was at present dallying with a teaspoon. He even laughed boisterously, flinging back his head, and little knew that behind Nanny's smiling face was a terrible dread, because his chair had once given way before.

"Oh, Nanny, for shame! How can you expect to follow our conversation when you only listen to Mr. Dishart?"

"She is saying, Nanny," Gavin broke in, almost gaily for a minister, "that she saw me recently wearing a cloak. You know that I have no such thing."

"Na," Nanny answered artlessly, "you

At this Babby smiled ratefully to him and then both laughed, or they had heard Nanny remarking to be kettle, "But I wouldna has been naneangry if she had telled Enoch that the mister was to take his tea here. Susy'll nedelieve't though I tell her, as tell her I wil."

To Nanny the table nor presented a rich appearance, for beside the teapot there were butter and loaf-bred and cheesies, a biscuit of which only farums knows the secret.

"Draw in your chair, Ur. Dishart," his

CHAPTER XV.

To Nanny it was a disving experience to static, and with assumed calmness, invite the minister not to spare the loat-bread. Babbie's prattle, and even Gavin's answes, were but an indistinct noise to her, to be as little regarded, in the excitenent of watching whether Mr. Dishart toticed that there was a knife for the butur, as the music of the river by a man who is catching trout. Every time Gavin's cur went to his lips Nanny calculated (correctly) how much he had drank, and yet, what he right moment arrived, she asked in the English voice that is fashionable, at ceromonies, "if his cup was toom." Perhaps it was well that Nanny had these matters to engross her, for though Gavin spoke freely, he was saving nothing of lasting value, and some of his remarks to the Egyptian, if preserved for the calmer contemplation of the merrow, might have seemed frivolous to himself. Usually his observations were scrambled for, like harpence at a wedding, but to-day they were REDUCTION IN PRICES.

BRENER BROS.' NEW LEADER The National Melodrama Brand, PATROL, Is Sure to Be a Winner.

Messrs. Brener Bres., the successful manufacturers of Nos. 182-190 Horton street London, are in the field with a new leader, which has been happily named "THH PATROL." They intend to make this eigar popular wherever the Unior Jack and Stars and Stripes float. It is a Cuban hand-made eigar, of which the filler is all Havana, mild and fragrant. The label, which is the design of the Patrol Co., is strikingly original. The words in which the names of the manufacturers occur at appropriate intervals. Nothing in the way of at label that is so simple, and at the same time so rich and attractive, has been originated, and it would be impossible to present to the trade a more elegant package. "The Patrol," eigar is certain to win instant recognition, and to increase largely the annual output of its manufacturers.
