WRITER RITA

Encounters at Dinner Lady Warwick, Whom She Scores in Book.

London, May 17. - There was a dramatic moment the other night at the new "Vagabonds' dinner," when Lady Warwick came face to face with Rita he novelist, who outdoes even Marie Corelli in her denunciation of society's foibles and vices.

daring, very slightly veiled portrait of the beautiful countess. Whether or not the cap fits, the countess evidently bears no malice, for after a close scrutiny of the face of the writer, who sat almost immediately opposite her, she asked the hostess of he evening to present Rita, and with the radiant smile and charm for which she is noted, expressed the pleasure it gave her to meet so distinguished

The Vagabonds who had read Rita's latest, in which all the secrets of the art of the masseuse are given away, including the terrible skinning process which a certain Lady Ripley is said to have undergone, looked on in amused astonishment, but only smiles and compliments were exchanged between the noted beauty, who, whatever process her complexion may have un-dergone, looked her loveliest, all in her favorite white, with a huge spray of diamonds flashing across the cor-sage of her white satin gown; a boa shoulders, and a Juliet net of gold or her fair fair.

Rita, who is petite and dark, with bright, elever eyes and brown hair, was all in red chiffon, with touches of black Quite undismayed by adverse criticism Quite undismayed by adverse criticism in some quarters of her latest novel, Rita, who is known in private life as Mrs. Desmond Humphreys, is apparently thoroughly enjoying her visit to town. With her daughter, a pretty, dark-eyed schoolgirl, she is stopping at the Lyceum Club, in Piccadilly, to which so many Americans belong. Americans belong.

She retains a room in the club as her permanent London headquarters, and of-ten runs up to town from her quiet sea-side home at Parkstone, near Bourne-mouth. She is sometimes to be seen in Rotten Row, possibly taking notes for some future denunciation of the foibles of society. Certainly some of the faces faces from life, and for mere man, who has read her book in spite of the warning in the preface—or rather because of it-there are no secrets left about how mplexions are made up.

RUSSELL SAGE DYING But Famous Financier Is Still Keen

After His Interests.

New York, May 16.—Russell Sage is and his feeble legs refuse to carry him any longer. But he is nearly 90 years old. Nature is simply asserting itself. His faculties are infirm, but his ruling passion is as strong as it ever was. Although his memory is almost gone, he never forgets the days for the meetings of the boards of directors of which he is a member, and always sends his brother-in-law, Mr. Slocum, down town to get the $10 gold pieces, to which he is not entitled, but which are paid as fees to the directors who attend. Mr. Sage is not entitled to the fee any more than any other absent director, but he demands it been carried on for some years past, just the same, and his associates are but the recent discovery of the value willing to pay it rather than disturb of the electrical current for the purifi-His fees as a director amount to $50 or everyone is naturally interested and bonds piled away in safe degrasps at them as though they were aflame.

Ratepayers Impatient at Delay in

Many of the wonderful inventions of Edison and others are now past history and accepted facts, but scientists have been busy experimenting with the electric current for other than mechanical purposes, applying it in the practice of medicine as well as in the arts, sciences and many manufactures. The latest but by no means the least important application of the electric current is for the purification and sterilization of various food products.

Experiments along these lines have his peace of mind. Mr. Sage is a mem- cation and sterilization of flour, has ber of twelve or fifteen corporations, attracted wide-spread attention, as $60 a week, and although he has a anything pertaining to the purification hundred millions or more in stocks of food. of the electrical process makes it possible to greatly improve the finished product. The new process is extremely interesting: Briefly, it consists in purifying air by passing it through a tremendous electrical flame, the action of this flame upon the air being something in the than marvelous. The finished flour emerges from the

That the patents covering these pro cesses are valuable, is evidenced by the extensive litigation in which the various patentees are involved in both England and the United States, from which is disclosed the fact that practically every large and important miller in both countries has adopted some one or other of the various patented systems in his mills and this is perhaps the most conclusive evidence of the merit of the process In view of the apparent great im provement in the wholesomeness and nutritive qualities of flour by use of these inventions, it is hoped that it may not be long before every miller been reading about the strike in Chi- will adopt the electrical system of pur-
