It used to be considered a wonderful thing to engrave the Lord's prayer on a three cent piece. At the last meeting of the San Francisco Microscopical society the president exhibited an engraving upon a glass plate of the Lord's prayer so minutely executed that on the same scale nine copies of the entire bible could be produced within

Not overworked—"I don't ask any man's advice," said the man with the big bump of self-esteem. "I do my own thinking." "Yes," murmured Fogg, "I should think you might, and not be greatly overworked, either."

Etiquette in Germany forbids the carrying of parcels, no matter how small, by a gentleman. Under immense pressure of necessity, a lady may take home in her own hands a small purchase, or carry a book or roll of music to the house of a friend. When a dressmaker comes to try on a little walking jacket, a small boy must needs walk behind, bearing the garment on his arm. An officer cannot under any circum.

A great part of Spring gardens, that curious little precint between Charing Cross and St. James' park, and one of the most interesting localities in central London, is to be torn down. In the time of Charles I, it was a fair garden, with a pheasantry and a bowling green, and took its name from a spring of water. Many remarkable men resided there. In a few years it will be difficult to identify the houses inhabited by Prince Rupert, Lord Crofts, Colley Cibber, Sir Edward Hungerford and George Canning.

Priests are openly insulted all over France. Some rowdies let a huge buildog on the Abbe Veinet, professor of theology, in Paris lately, and the beast tore his cassock to shreds, and but for a humane passor by would have done the old man serious injury. The police lately rescued from a crowd of ruffians, who were dragging him to the river, the Abbe Fortier, an eminent prison chaplain, who wears the decoration of the legion of honor for planting, amid a shower of bullets, the ambulance flag on the church tower at Gravelotte, thereby saving all the wounled in the church.
