Mr. John Leys had read both of The World's articles on the dower question, and agreed that something should be done to abate the sance. He said: "The easier you make it to get indefeasible titles to real estate the better it is for everybody. One of the great difficulties about dower is that in the great majority of cases no evidence is ever filed showing that at the time of the in the great majority of cases no evidence is ever filed showing that at the time of the deeds being executed the grantor was an unmarried man. Now you have to hunt up evidence everywhere to find whether some man who had deeded his property in the beginning of the century was married at the time of the execution of the conveyance or that his wife had since died. For instance, I have now before me a requisition of title for lots in Leslie-street in Toronto and one of the requisitions is: 'Was John Grey, who executed a deed in 1808 to Nathaniel Hastings, a married man at that date; and, if married, is his wife now dead?' Another is for evidence that the widow of Nathaniel Hastings, who devised this property Another is for evidence that the widow of Nathaniel Hastings, who devised this property to his children about 1840, is now dead. It is simost impossible in many cases to find out whether a man was married or not married years ago. No one can swear that such a man was not married but the man himself, and if he is dead there is no absolute proof to be had. There was a time when something could be said favorable to dowers, but now that a wrife can transfer her property as freely as if she were as unmarried woman nothing can be said in favor of the system. Husbands can be said in favor of the system. Husbands can transfer their real estate freely and husbands can transfer their real estate freely and husbands can transfer their thank stock, building society stock, and mort-marked was a first with the man himself, and if the word of the system. Husbands can transfer their real estate freely and husbands can transfer their real estate freely and husbands can transfer their thank stock, building society stock, and mort-marked was a first with the man himself, and if the word of the system. Husbands can transfer their real estate freely and husbands can transfer their gages. They should be given the right to transfer their real estate in the same way. The Torrens system of land transfer would do away with much of the nuisance, as no old dower could be claimed under it. The Torrens system is much better than our present system of registration."

THE BROKERS CHARGES AGAINST STAFF INSPECTOR ARCHAROLD.

Dr. D. A. O'Sallivan was interviewed. He said: "It is probably desirable that come alterations should be made in the law relating to dower, but I do not go the extent of say-Suggrested.

Fow people object to dowers on account of their giving to widows a share of the estate their husbands were possessed of. No one wants to dispossess the widow of her portion.
But the dower system, as at present operating in Ontario, is denounced because it is a clog to business and because under it scarcely a property is free from the danger of an old claim being pur in against it.

It is acknowledged that in very few cases a wife reluses to sign the deed if her 'husband carnestly desires to sell the property—not one perhaps in a thourand. But the alleged refusal of the wife is very often put forward as a reason for declaring a bargain off, and this is annoying to the prospective purchaser. As has been pointed out, the value of dower, if it really has any, lies in its securing to widows their portion.

The law can be easily amended to clear away most of the dissatisfaction.
Let married women have dower in ouly the property her husband dies possessed of. If this were the case married men could transfer their real estate with the same facility with which they can sell their bank stock.

unless registered within, say, six months aftera widow has come into possession of right to such a dower. This would dispense wit the great trouble now experienced in proving that in the year 1820 Silas Jones was a blooming benedict.

In this connection it may be added that the general introduction of the Torrens system of land transfer would be the means of diverting the immense amount of energy now daily expended in "searching titles" to some more profitable employment.

Causes Many Inconveniences.

Mr. W. R. Meredith, Q.C., was seen by The World in his new Church-street offices. He had read the "dower" articles but had not yet given the matter consideration. "There is no doubt, however," he said, "that the present system of dower gives rise to great inconvenience. We have instances of this

The simple statement by Mr. Archabold that he had reason to believe that an illegal business was boing oarried on by me and that he felt it his duty to break it up I might concede to be sufficient to warrant the steps he took, harsh and unnecessary though they were in the manner of execution. I have, however, such a number of facts to lay before you as do, I think, warrant the presumption of malice and of such an over-estimate on his part of the privileges of his position and such utter recklessness as to the rights of citizens as it would be dangerous to allow to go unreproved.

LONDON, May 3.—The cross examination of Mr. Parnell was continued before the Parnell Commission to-day. Mr. Parnell testified he had often reproved Mr. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, for the violent articles shat appeared in that paper. He had not publicly repudiated the articles because he did not consider that to be the way to effect the alterations he desired in the tone of the articles. Mr. Parnell said he considered Mr. O'Brien's teachings to be in advance of his own.

Mr. Parnell denied that he knew "Number One" under the name of Tynan or any other name, and said he had never heard of Mr. Egan's being associated with "the martyrs' fund" for the benefit of the families of Phenix Park murderers. He saw nothing criminal in the fund, and rather thought it was right to assist the innocent victims. "The martyrs' fund" might not, howeyer, have been the most appropriate name for such a fund. He could not, he said, recollect denouncing optrages between 1878 and 1881. He believed the ourrages perpetrated to have been the work of small secret societies. Witness was then asked whether if secret societies adverse to the League had existed and it a vast majority of the people had belonged to the League there would not have been ample evidence obtained to convict the perpetrators of outrages, and their policy of the people had belonged to the League there would not have been ample evidence obtained to convict the perpetrators of outrages. They also contain nothing of importance. there would not have been ample evidence obtained to convict the perpetrators of outrages, but he parried the question, saying that that might or might not have been the case.

Here occurred the most remarkable incident in the witness cross-examination. Attorney-General Webster quoted a statement made by Parnell in the House of Commons, during the debate on Mr. Forster's bill in 1881, suspending the writ of habeas corpus, to the effect that secret societies had then ceased to exist in Ireland. 'Did you believe that when you said it?' asked the Attorney-General. "No," replied Parnell. "At any rate it was a grossly exaggerated statement!"

The chairman in a neat opening speech declared himself a thorough believer in the education of both sexes. He referred to the small number of students (4) present at the opening of the college in 1888, which had steadily moreased, till now the number was 25. Eight have passed through the college and been successful beyond precedent, invariably taking honors. He bore testimony to the unrequired labor of the professors in the discharge of their duties at the college, to the fact that they had "labored without money and without price."
