GEMS OF THOUGHT.

The chafe comes not by wearing chains, but by feeling them. Keep up courage, even if your work apparently progresses slowly.

Fine sense and exalted sense are not half so useful as common sense,
Our affections are our life. We live by them: they supply our warmth.

by them; they supply our warmth.

Method is the very hinge of business, and there is no method without punc-

Husband your time that, when needed, you may have a large store to use wisely.

Life is an earnest business, and no man was ever made great or good by a diet of nothing but broad grins.

If you have a friend with whose conduct you have frequent occasion to find fault, try on him the persuasions of merita praise.

Sincerity is speaking as we think, be-merited praise.

Sincerity is speaking as we think, believing as we pretend, acting as we profess, performing as we promise, and being as we appear to be.

Charity is never lost. It may be of no service to those it is bestowed on, yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.

How sweet it is to help each other to feel as we lie down at night, that we have made some one glad, or have lightened a load being borne, or brought a smile where only tears were resting.

Character is ever reduplicating itself, and every bright example sheds its light down through the ages. Memory treasures it, affection cherishes it, history preserves it; it can no more be lost than can the vital influence of the sun and air be lost to the ever-growing for-

The value of our life on earth will not be judged by the success, but by the purity of our endeavors and our perseverance even where there was no great wisible result. We ourselves do not even know what we have done in our own strength, how much we owe to others, and how much to a higher will. It will be good not to put too much to our own account.

No matter what motive prompts one to make a promise, when it is made it should be regarded as a sacred thing—as a pledge to be fulfilled if it possibly can be. Every one should consider his word as good as his bond, and if he desires that others should have the same good opinion of him, he must on every occasion make good his word.

Speaking English.

Speaking English.

A British naval officer who was recently in New York told some of his American acquaintances what he believed to be the real cause of the friendly feeling between the British and American navy, which was recently manifested at London and at Bosten, and has so often been exemplified at other times and places. "The chief cause of it," he says, "is the English language. We can speak to the Americans in our own tongue whenever we meet them, and thus we are able to fraternize with them more closely than with the officers of any other navy in the world. If you had been cruising in distant seas, as I hav been for a lifetime, you would understand this. In many a port between the equator and the poles we have lain near the battleships of other powers without being able to speak to a soul aboard of them; but the sight of the Yankee flag at sea or in port has always been a godsend to us, for we always knew that every man there, from the captain to the crew, spoke the speech of our race, and that we could hail each other in the vernacular of good fellowship.

"I was in the Mediterranean, where we heard a dozen jargons, from Algerian and Egyptian to Greek and Spanish;

"I was in the Mediterranean, where we heard a dozen jargons, from Algerian and Egyptian to Greek and Spanish; I was in Chinese waters, where we were surrounded by junks upon which yellow Mongolians were cackling; I was at one time in service in the Indian ocean, as I afterwards was on the eastern and western seaboard of South America, until I got he witnest abburrance of the western seatoard of South America, un-til I got the utmost abhorrence of the fools who built the tower of Babel and brought confusion into speech. After such experiences for years, you can't imagine how I felt when we sailed into Boston bay, and heard on all sides the old familiar tongue, and were welcomed by comrades of the American navy. We by comrades of the American navy. We seemed to be again in our own country. We felt at home, We gave back the hearty cheers which we got, and touched glasses as if we had been lifelong friends. It was all because we spoke the same language, The bond between us grew out of our speech. If the American commodore a China spoke truly when he said that 'blood is thicker than water,' I would say that language is stronger than either of them. Our crew found it out, too. When our crews are on shore leave in foreign parts, among Brazilians, or Japanese, or Hindoos, they can't get along with the natives, but they are ready for high jinks among the Americans, as you found out last year at New York, when the Blake was here and as Boston found out last week when she was there. It is all because the language of the United out hat week when she was there. It is all because the language of the United States as the same as that of England. The officers and crews of the American naval ships who are having a splendid time in London will confirm every word I have uttered when they give their side of the area or when they still of the average of the of the case, or when they tell of the ex-periences which they have had at other periences when they have had at other times when cruising along coasts or stopping at ports where the speech was strange to them. There is no doubt that the oft-repeated manifestations of friendliness between the navies of the two powers are due to the fact that both countries speak the same languague."—New York Sun.

Bicycle stealing is becoming more preva-lent, and the thieves daily more daring. Yesterday morning Mr. Charles DeGruchy. traveler for Cockshutt & Co., left his wheel, a new Wanderer, No. 151, outside the warehouse door, Front-street. Upon returning a few moments after he found it had been
