

and Professor Scrimger has promised a series of popular articles, such as those of other years; which with other contributions will appear later.

We may add that we shall also publish the papers read at the Graduates' Institute, for we feel sure they will prove of great interest to all our readers, and especially so to graduates, since those who were present will wish to preserve the series, and those who could not hear them will be glad to read them now.

While we think of it, we would like to renew the invitation of other years, to all graduates, English and French, to avail themselves at any time of our columns for the discussion of any subject connected with the welfare of the College.

THE GRADUATES' INSTITUTE.

The second meeting of the Graduates' Institute and Reunion was held the week before College opened.

The programme was excellent. We have not space here to give a review of the different papers read, nor is that necessary since, as we have stated, they are to be printed in our numbers, and every reader will have an opportunity of judging their quality for himself. We may, however, be permitted a remark or two. The first was the Principal's paper, "The Study of Sociology," which showed careful preparation and consideration, and which might be summed up by the text, "Love is the fulfilling of the Law." Professor Coussirat's paper on "Modern French Theology" was next, and dealt in a concise manner with the different schools of thought in France, and their relations to one another; it was much appreciated by all present.

Prof. Campbell was the third member of the staff to take part. His subject was "The Evolution of Theology," the paper which will be found at the beginning of this number. It dealt with a theme which has excited a good deal of warm discussion, and dealt with it in a way which quite satisfied all present.
