The King Edward.

Located on the beautiful shores of Lake Ontario, the port city of Toronto deserves its Huron Indian name of "meeting place". From a small trading outpost to a contemporary urban centre, Toronto continues to invite.

"Meeting Place" aptly describes this city of 3.5 million which is today a remarkable blend of people from 80 different cultures speaking 56 languages and practising 25 religions.

A MOSAIC

The cultural diversity is boldly evident when you walk through Toronto's numerous and distinctive neighbourhoods. Street signs are often in both English and the predominant cultural language of the area. The cuisines of the world are featured in the city's 5,000 restaurants. Enjoy the "Corso Italia" with its sidewalk cafes, gelato shops and boutiques. Travel to Asia and discover not just one but three Chinatowns, home to people from Hong Kong, mainland China, Taiwan and other Southeast Asian countries. Or explore Kensington Market, the lively bazaar that has become, a friendly blend of Portuguese and West Indian. Little Athens, Koreatown and the West Indies of the North are accessible and easy to enjoy.

CELEBRATING UNIQUENESS

Toronto's ethnic communities celebrate their many faces in festivals. In June, more than 40 different cultures erect pavilions so that all can sample the music and food of the world during the Metro International Caravan festivities. That same month, fierce teams compete on Lake Ontario during the Chinese Dragon Boat Race. In late July, hundreds of
