

In selecting the matter for this publication, it shall be the Editor's constant endeavour to form such arrangements as may render it extensively and permanently useful. It will embrace

In selecting the matter for this publication, it shall be the Editor's constant endeavour to form such arrangements as may render it extensively and permanently useful. It will embrace whatever is important or interesting in the political occurrences of Europe and America. The proceedings of the Provincial Legislature and our Domestic Intelligence, &c, occasionally, Reports and Papers on the Trade, Commerce and Agriculture of this country and their relation with other colonies ;—a correct statement of the Prices Current of articles of import and export at this market as it may be practicable to obtain ;—extracts from the Prices Current of other places ;—a correct list of the arrival and departure of vessels at Quebec, with a general statement of their cargoes, and the names of the different consignees, or shippers concerned in the same, with every information on that or other heads, which may prove of utility to, or interest the Mercantile Body in this country, and which may render it a complete and general repository for Commercial and Political Intelligence.—The publisher trusts, that his exertions, combined with the assistance which will be afforded, will enable him to realise the principal object of his design, which is to render his paper of public utility and deserving of general encouragement.

CONDITIONS.

The MERCANTILE JOURNAL is published on the WEDNESDAY of each week. At present in the English language only. It is printed on good paper, with new and elegant type. The size, for the present, is Demy, which will be increased to a sheet of Royal, as soon as a number of advertisements sufficient to supply the difference of labour, have been received. The subscription is Four Dollars per annum, exclusive of postage, payable half-yearly, in advance. The first half-yearly subscription to be paid on subscribing:

The Editor now respectfully submits the merits of his proposals to the impartial judgment of a discerning public, and looks with confidence to their decision, in which, he is convinced, they will acknowledge the utility of his undertaking, and afford it their generous approbation and encouragement.

GEORGE J. WRIGHT.

OCTOBER, 1816.