The War of the Classes

By JACK LONDON

Cloth, 12mo, $1.50 net; by mail, $1.61

In his characteristic, energetic English, the writer makes very clear the present irreconcilable struggle between workingmen as a class and capitalists as a class; the question is: What will be the outcome of the struggle? He writes pungently of the "economic necessity" whose by-product is the tramp, that "scapegoat to our industrial sinning"; and of "scabs," both laborers and capitalists. "The Question of the Maximum" faces the dividing of the ways when capitalistic production shall have reached its full development. The whole book is calculated to arouse serious thought on present conditions.
