Engineer Rust went to England to investigate methods of sewage disposal, and he favors the proposition of pouring the sewage into the lake about nine miles east lake, west of the western channel, between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 gallons of sewage daily. In addition to this, the remainder of the sewage, between 15,000,000 and 16,000,000 gallons daily, Is emptied into the bay. There is generally a current in or out of the bay, and this carried the sewage out of either the western or eastern. He himself was in the cotton business and out of the bay, and this carried the sewage out of either the western or eastern gap. Both these entrances and also the mouth of the Garrison Creek and Dufferinstreet sewers are only about two miles from the intake pipe. In the winter especially we have a number of whids from a northwesterly direction, which would have a tendency to carry the sewage directly towards the intake pipe, but so far there has never been any trace of contamination of sewage at the point whence our water supply is drawn, and I believe the Medical Health Officer is quite satisfied as to the purity of the water supplied to the citizens. If quring all these years we have been able to discharge this large quantity of sewage in such close pears we have been able to discharge this in accordance with Mr. Murray's idea large quantity of sewage in such close proximity to our water supply without endangering it, I think it is reasonable to assume that there can be no possibility of contamination if the sewage is discharged into the lake at a distance of nine miles from the waterworks intake pipe.

Mr. P. W. Ellis and Mr. Roden said the manufacturers were next discelled in Mr. Rust says also: "The Medical Health Officer refers to the difference in the temperature of the sewage and the lake water. This probably amounts to about ten degrees. It took me four months of hard and continuous work. I walked hundreds of miles and made a thousand calls or more. Much of the time I worked from 8 o clock in the morning till 10 o'clock at night, besides doing my own work. We lived almost entirely on Shredded Wheat.
