Air Themselves Before the Police Magistrate.

Bercier Fined and Thomatis Bound Over for Challenging to a Duel.

They Spoke Splendid English-A Family Disagreement-A Bad Boy-Women Ordered to Leave London.

English, pure and undefiled, streamed from the lips of Cuban cigarmakers at the Police Court, today. Their command of the language was marvelous, and they had all the modern improvements. For instance, one described an altercation as "chewing," and another told the magistrate that he had "tumbled" to a certain affair. The majority of them spoke French and Spanish, which, no doubt, were great minion. aids in mastering the English tongue. The assault case of Thomatis vs. Bercier, which was again before the magistrate, drew out this flood of eloquence. The complainant, Arthur Thomatis, charged Robert Bercier with striking him a week ago Wednesday, while at work at Brener's cigar factory. Thomatis, with much flu-ency, told the court that Bercier had work, and had returned. Witness was minutes," continued Thomatis, "and then asked me to go downstairs. told him that chances were not equal, as he was the much bigger man; so I refused." Thomatis denied that he had his pistol or offered to fight Bercier with that weapon. Edward Bouny, another young Cu ban, testified in Thomatis' favor, in big words with the utmost propriety.

superb English, using a multitude of Bercier had annoyed Thomatis ever since the latter came to the factory, the witness said. He admitted that Thomatis, after being provoked, had called Bercier a vile name. Ben Rickey and John Arnold gave evidence in Bercier's favor. Rickey said that Thomatis offered to meet Bercier at 6 o'clock that evening in an open lot, claiming that he was not big enough to fight Bercier with fists. Most of the dialogue between Bercier and Thomatis was in Spanish.

Bercier, a handsome, intelligent young fellow, said Thomatis had called him vile names repeatedly, though witness had asked him to stop. Witness said that Thomatis had his board me, but that I did not need one.' Joseph Kelly and James Donnelly testified in Bercier's favor. The latter admitted that there was a combination against Thomatis. Senor De la Cotta, who has a Paderewski head of hair, and Senor Fagnoneta were champions of Bercier, De Cotta had not seen the assault, but he heard the blow, and "tumbled" to it that there had been an encounter. The magistrate said he would settle the case on the evidence of Bercier and Thomatis. Bercier had been teasing Thomatis, who retorted with vile name, whereupon Bercier struck him. He imposed a fine of $2 on Bercier, each party to pay his own costs. Bercier had entered a charge against Thomatis of having challenged him to fight a duel. Bercier repeated the statement that Thomatis had invited him to fight with pistols. "He told me if I wouldn't fight he would blow my head off." The P. M .- Aren't you afraid of Tho-

"No, sir; if a man has to die, why he must," replied Bercier philosophically. Thomatis was bound over to kepe the peace in $100 sureties.
