Montreal, Dec. 18.-Commenting on the election, Le Canada (Liberal), says: The victory is one of the trusts and The victory is one of the trusts and big interests as against the people, and the latter, with Flavelle and his profiteering associates given a free hand, will suffer more than ever, not only in Quebec, but all over Canada. The Star, Unionist: "The position of Quebec today, with only three representatives in the union, and these not of French-Canadians, revives in acute form Canada's greatest national problem.
"It is wrong to impute disloyalty to the mass of those who voted against the union. Nobody can impugn Nova Scotia's loyalty, for instance. The situation in Quebec was different, but is explicable on the same grounds. Isolated in a large measure from the rest of Canada and from the great currents of the world by their language and by their naive lack of interest in outer affairs, the French-Canadians have been unquestionably less concerned in the war than their English-speaking confreres, and party politics has interfered with their proper education. In this fertile field demagogues, bigots and evil councillors of various sorts have shown a mischievous seed, helped not a little by men of their own type, but different n a large measure from the rest of Car men of their own type, but differen creeds, in other provinces."

Prince Albert, Sask., Dec. 18.—The Herald says: "Two significant answer were given in no uncertain manner by the people of Canada in yesterday's election. One was to the insolent chal-lenge thrown down by French-speaking Quebec, which has been the tail that wagged the dog for a good many years The other was that Canada is in the war to the end."
