WINTER COMES TO BEAVERTOWN

first flurry of snow came to rtown, and found the Beavers ng fast to get everything "shipe" for the long, cold winter. Father ver took Tom and Jerry to fix the it; and they added many little logs make the dam stronger; and they led up all the cracks with small stones and clay and mud, until the dam didn't ak; and only a thry stream flowed over led dam in the centre.

family in the water at once for a frolic. There was diving, swimming and ducking; and swimming in matches, and ducking; and swimming in matches, and water sports; and everybody was jolly and very happy.

Then Father Beaver hit the water with his big tall, as a last signal, and made a fine dive as he swam under water and then swam into the secret canal leading into the cellar. Then he limbed up into the big dining-room of his house, followed by Mother Eeaver and the whole family. And the Twins were the life of the party. They were always full of fun and were always playing tricks on each other.

illed up all the cracks with small stones and clay and mud, until the dam didn't leak; and only a tiny stream flowed over the dam in the centre.

While Father Beaver and the Twins were fixing the dam for winter, Mother Beaver and the rest of the family were cutting down trees, and cutting off little sections of the branches, to add to their big wood pile under the water, very near their house. The bark of this poplar, yellow birch, and willow was to be their food, to last them all winter.

Then the whole family helped Father Beaver make the walls and roof of their house thicker and warmer. It was a funny sight to see Tom and Jerry up on the roof, working like Beavers, while Father and Mother Beaver lifted up to them little logs, to lay on the roof as shingles. And it was just as funny to see the brothers and sisters wade and dive in Mirror Pond, and get big armfuls of mud and clay, and carry it to the house to plaster up all the cracks in the roof and walls.

It was certainly strange to see Mother Beaver and all the brothers and sisters wadding out of Mirtor Pond with big

It was certainly strange to see Mother Beaver and all the brothers and sisters wading out of Mirror Pond with big armfuls of black mud, held tight in their little hands and arms, while they pressed their chins down hard on the mud to keep it from falling out of their arms.

Father Beaver and Tom and Jerry, stood on the roof, and plastered the mud all over the roof and walls of the house, so as to keep out the wind and cold during the long winter.

And when it was all finished, Father Beaver said, "Now, all our work is done, so let's all dive in the Mirror Pond for a bath and a good swim, and then we'll go into our house for supper. And you would have chuckled to see the whole

As yet no complete report has been published of the excellent work done at the emergency hospital in the basement of the Latter Day Saints' Church under the supervision of No. 4 Nursing Division. The following report has been submitted by Mrs. J. F. Thompson, O.C. of that division:

"The hospital was opened on Monday evening, October 21, and altogether there were 33 patients admitted. For the first few days the work fell on the shoulders of a few women, putting up beds, caring for the sick, giving words of comfort, etc. Later they were reinforced by help from the Medical School, the students showing themselves up as sympathetic to both children and suppared to the published.
