Chancellor Boyd Finds Harbottle Had Power to Enderse Negotiable Instruments.

SUIT AGAINST BANKS

At Osgoode Hall yesterday Chancelor Boyd dismissed the action of the Toronto Club against the Imperial Bank, the Dominion Bank, and the Imperial Trusts Company for a return of the money paid b ythese institutions to Capt. Colin C. Harbottle, the chib's ecretary, who absconded.

The plaintiff sued the Dominion Bank for $1583.01, the Imperial Bank for $10,022.60, and the Imperial Trust Co. for $2805.35. The judgment follows: The result of all the evidence, oral and documentary, leads to the belief that the secretary of the club had all along power to endorse negotiable instruments exercisable acocrding to the discretion and honesty of each individual secretary. The secretaries before Harbottle acted honretaries before Harbottle acted honestly and kept the club moneys separate in the club's bank subject to the centrol of the head and certain officers of the club as indicated in Mr.
Osler's letter of Sept. 19, 1900. Former secretaries appeared to have used two kinds of rubber stamps for endorsement, one simply "The Toronto Club" and the other "Pay to the order of the Dominion Bank for the Toronto Club" Secretary." But whether the longer or shorter form of words was used the signature of the secretary was the completion of the endorsement and it was still open to him if he chose on either endorsement to draw the money for the cheque instead of depositing it as commercial paper. chose on either endorsement the money for the cheque instead of depositing it as commercial paper. Harbottle departed from the practice of the earlier secretaries by paying only part of the club cheques received into the company's bank. The larger part were so applied, but a minor part he cashed or handled so as to have the amounts deposited subject to his own control. The officers and members knew or had the means of knowing that he was in the habit of depositing and cashing members' cheques to the club for the accommodation of the members, and it was apparently left to his own discretion as to how far or to what extent this should be done. The defendants were not aware and were not informed that any redone. The defendants were not aware and were not informed that any restrictions were placed upon him in this respect, and none in fact have been made to appear, and in the usual course of business they received cheques properly endorsed by him and credited him with the proceeds. It think he had authority to endorse in the general way and that his acts. think he had authority to endorse in the general way and that his acts were not conversions of the property as between him and the club. The meneys so deposited may be regarded as trust money of the club and the defendants were not cognizant before or after of any breach of trust by him. * * * * It is not necessary to dwell on the special features of the defence of the Imperial Trust Co. As to the greater part of the claim I think the fair inference from the evidence is missed with costs.
