

RESTORE GEMS OF ART TO ITALY

Priceless Manuscripts and Historical Relics

Secret Agreement With Austria for Restoration—Particulars of Some of the Treasures.

Vienna, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press Correspondence).—The government thus far has refused to make public the secret agreement which Dr. Karl Renner, then chancellor, agreed to give to Italy many valuable works of art, manuscripts and historical relics not provided for surrender in the treaty of St. Germain, despite demands by art associations in influential persons for that information.

The history of the matter is interesting and The Associated Press has been able to learn from authoritative sources some of its details. While the guarded admissions of the government generally are phrased in the future tense as to the delivery of these articles, as a matter of fact they are all understood to be now in Italian possession.

Their seizure began when the Italian armistice commission, under General Segre, first arrived in Vienna in February of last year, the contention of the commissioners being that under the treaty of the war of 1866 these treasures should long since have been delivered. Among the articles taken by General Segre were the famous tapestries of Montua and as regards them the Austrians conceded title and assisted in their delivery.

Then began the removal of pictures from the Hofmuseum and Academy of Fine Arts which had been brought to Vienna in 1816 and 1858. These had been collected from many churches in the Venetian territory. It was done by order of Francis I, then sovereign of Venice which was at that time a part of the Austrian Empire. The Austrians bring forward a supplementary treaty to that of 1866 regarding these objects, intended to clear title. They render this clause as follows: "Austria will keep (guard) the pictures exported in 1866 which his majesty the emperor sometime ago gave to the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna and to other galleries in the empire."

It is around the word "guard" the Italians centre their argument for possession, contending it means "take in custody" or "for safe keeping" not possession or gift. The Austrians say they have documents in the state archives to show that in return the emperor gave to Italy presents of art works far in excess of value to those in controversy, among them being the priceless collections of Manfrin and Bossi.

The Italians also took from the National Library or other places additional treasures such as autographs, musical books, and three manuscripts worth several millions of dollars, one of which, "The Genesis of Vienna," is said to be the most valuable late Roman manuscript in existence.

With all the objects safe in Italy, when the peace conference began in Paris the Italians advanced further claims for works of art from Austria, demanding the pick of pictures from the National Gallery in Vienna and virtually all the bronzes and statues made in Italy or that ever were in Italy. The objects thus covered were estimated to be worth about 4,000,000,000 gold francs.

Their claims were rejected, however, by the conference and then began the Italian effort to effect a special treaty with Austria to obtain her end. The negotiations proceeded until this Spring when Dr. Renner finally signed it on the occasion of his Italian visit. Under the term General Segre's seizures are legalized and a large number of valuable objects are ceded in addition.

The most important are the Reliquary of Cardinal Bessarione and the Cross of St. Theodore. The first named is a remarkable specimen of the Venetian gothic goldsmith's art of the 15th century and the other a unique piece of Byzantine goldsmithy. In terms of dollars they are said to be beyond price. The agreement also gives to Italy a quantity of bronzes, historical relics, manuscripts and other objects, including Donatello's "Angel Playing the Tambourine" and two bronzes by Antico. The whole of the famous Duke de Este collection is included.

In return Italy renounces her claims to certain objects of more or less value, among them the coronation garments of the old German emperors. Finally Italy promises her help to save the Austrian collections from the claims of other powers under Article 196 of the treaty of St. Germain.

According to report there was a verbal promise on the part of Italy to assist Austria wherever possible in the boundary delimitations now in progress and certain other political assurances.

It is understood the Austrian section of the reparations commission is making inquiries into the whole transaction as it may affect the assets of the country to which the treaty of St. Germain gives title.

MEMORIALS OF 'PASSENGERS OF THE MAYFLOWER

Boston, Nov. 8.—The erection at Provincetown and Boston of memorials to the five Mayflower passengers who died at these places will be the contribution of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants to the celebration of the tercentenary of the Pilgrims' landing. A tablet will be set in a bowl-der at Provincetown and another will be placed on the building in Spring Lane, Boston, now occupying the site of the last home of Mary (Chilton) Winslow, who is said to have been the first girl passenger to land at Plymouth. Four passengers died during the December days of 1620 while the Mayflower lay at anchor in Cape Cod harbor, now Provincetown. Two days before the little ship set sail for the permanent settlement at Plymouth, James Chilton, who had been one of the signers of the famous Mayflower compact in Cape Cod harbor, died. A day before the little band had lost Mrs. Dorothy Bradford, first wife of Governor William Bradford, by accidental drowning, and Edward Thomson, a servant and Jasper More, a child also died.

Mary Chilton, who was the daughter of James Chilton, sailed on for Plymouth with her mother, and struggled through the trying times of the colony's early days. She later married John Winslow and before 1660 they removed to Boston, where she died in 1679, having survived her husband by five years. She was the only Mayflower passenger to become a resident of Boston.

Evil of Substitution Exposed

A dealer substitutes because he makes more profit on an inferior article. A local citizen was induced to take a substitute for Putnam's Corn Extractor, with the result that the substitute burnt his toes and failed to cure. Putnam's contains no acid and is guaranteed. ## GOVERNMENT AID FOR UNIVERSITIES IN OLD COUNTRY

London, Nov. 8.—(By Canadian Press).—The government proposes next year to increase by half a million sterling the grant in aid of university education. This was announced recently by Austen Chamberlain, when speaking at a luncheon given in the University of Birmingham. He said the grant this year was 1,000,000 sterling, with an additional half a million to assist the universities and colleges in wiping out debts that were due to circumstances arising out of the war.

Mr. Chamberlain said he had undertaken to grant 1,500,000 for a term of years unless he was prevented by overwhelming financial reasons. He also hoped to be able to do something in the way of a special non-recurring grant to enable the federated universities' scheme of pensions to be adapted to the cases of older professors and teachers who had served before this pension scheme was in existence, and who therefore received only the smallest pittance from it.

Mr. Chamberlain said that the country had spent for many years immense sums on elementary education and considerable sums on secondary education, but on university education it had spent all too little. These were not days in which the chancellor could fling about public money with a lavish hand, he said. The government must be cautious in their expenditure, but they were ready to back their opinion of the value of the universities to the country.

THE SEEING EYE

Principal Reynolds of the Ontario Agriculture College thus delivers himself in the Agricultural Gazette of Canada:

The teacher who hopes to take a right place in the life of the country school district must cultivate the seeing eye and the understanding heart of persons and things rural. The usual, popular, melodrama, comic supplement, moving picture conception of the farmer and of country people must be forgotten. It is essentially and perniciously false. The farmer is something of a humorist, and takes delight in deceiving the simple-minded by a somewhat unfinished exterior. The city-bred person makes the fatal mistake of judging by outside appearances. To the city-trained eye there are two classes of persons, one wearing overalls and the other wearing white collars. The former class work with their hands. The latter class work with their brains. That is the superficial judgment, which ignores the fact that there is a very great deal of clear, hard-thinking done today by the men wearing overalls. At any rate, the farm belongs to both classes. The more understands of these discoveries, who it is the business of the agricultural college to make, the more he absorbs teaching which it is the business of college to spread abroad, the better farmer will be.
