The sun was hot and so was the frying pan which was hanging in the sun. The check door at breakfast was on the menu for the evening meal. When the good wife, who lives not a hundred miles from Eglington avenue, took down the pan to fry the bacon she found that it was too hot to touch with her bare hand.

is on the job? The pan with the thin silvers of bacon was soon placed on a chair and cooked the supper perfectly in a few minutes in the back garden.

"This is something new in fireless cooking," remarked the lady and then she looked at her hand, which was quite badly burned when she first took hold of the frying pan, and added, "Well, fireless, I suppose, but certainly not heatless."

A LITTLE PRAYER.

Where'er thou be, Or in the air, Or in the sea, This little prayer I pray for thee: God keep thee ever, Day and night— Face to the light— Thine armor bright— Thy scutcheon white— That no despite Thine honor smite! With infinite Sweet oversight, God keep thee ever, Heart's delight— And guard thee whole Sweet body, soul, And spirit high, That live or die, Thou glorify His Majesty— And ever be, Within His sight, His true and upright, Sweet and stainless, Pure and sinless, Perfect Knight!— John Oxenham, in "Fiery Cross."

Hon. L. P. Duff, judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, who was judge of appeal under the Military Service Act, represented Canada at the meeting of the Imperial Privy Council, at which the peace proclamation was signed in London.

"BAREBACK" GOWNS.

New York Times: Women in England do not need a Mrs. James Grieland to tell them that there are certain kind of gowns which are not the thing. They have decided unaided, and have given the gown to which they take special exception a name which, while it is suggestive of the circus, is sufficiently descriptive. They call it the "bareback" gown.

Over here it would be décollete with a low-cut back, but the English women are frank. They don't like that kind of gown and Paris itself cannot make them wear it.

Mrs. Wentz, who is a club woman in New York and for many years president of the Women's Republican Club, has been shocked recently by the indecency of the American woman's gowns. She objected to them even in the shop windows and put the shopkeepers in a panic by forming a committee to spy at the windows and see whether there was displayed in them lingerie which had a suggestion of inefficiency or undue transparency.

Women may look into the windows of English shops without tremors. The shopkeepers themselves speak with a high moral tone of these frocks. It is true those now in America have a certain scantiness, and the woman who wears a "bareback" gown to the theatre, if it also chances to be minus even the tiny straps that sometimes serve for sleeves, does not seem to the audience behind to be wearing any kind of gown. Not a thread of textile or lace is visible.

At an exhibition of gowns recently made in England a member of a large firm showing them said coldly:

"English women who wear bareback evening frocks are obviously ignorant of the fact that they are intended for a certain class of women only."

Certainly hair was scarce on Mr. Wearwig's head, but that was no reason why people should be so insulting over it. At last the jesting became too much to bear, so he lied himself to a hair restorer's establishment.

The counter, unlike Mr. Wearwig's head, was literally covered before he was finally satisfied. He was on the point of leaving the store when he turned around and subjected the clerk to a careful scrutiny.

"O, by the way," he exclaimed
