Avaunt, Cupid! Warn Beauty Contest Maids Set on Movie Careers

Boston, Feb. 9.—Not all beauty contest winners fall in love with magazine publishers and forget all about the glories of the cinema. Charlotte Brownbridge, who until a short time ago was considered the most charming high school girl in Watertown, Mass., then Charlotte entered a Boston beauty contest and won it.

Now she's in New York posing for famous artists, and listening to offers of motion picture contracts for no apparent reason. She says she means to pursue romance.

and take advantage of her "big chance." And she's making her way, for since the beauty show at Atlantic City in which she took part, artists have begged to paint her and made her delicate schoolgirl beauty immortal in galleries and on magazine covers.

Another beauty contest winner, claim- ed by the movies, who had "struck," is Miss Hazel Keener, winner of the Chicago Tribune's contest.

Miss Keener, originally a high school girl in Davenport, Iowa, is now a full-fledged movie player in Los Angeles, and "wedded to her art."

HOSPITAL TONES UP CATS' MEOWS
MAKES DOGS' TAILS THUMP ANEW

Dumb Invalids Recupate From Epidemic of Distemper, Animal World's "Flu," in League's Shelter; Have Regular Calling Hours Every Day.

New York, Feb. 9.—Greyhound and terrier, but mostly plain mutt, beat the odds and the cat's meow is temporarily stifled these days when distemper lurks in the muddy snow. The animal's own influenza, distemper, always on the alert, has found its winter victims, who lie patiently, and smelling of disinfectant in the hospital of the New York Women's League for Animals, at 800 Lafayette street.

The telephone rings constantly, and the woman who answers it reads from her chart that No. 675, a Dalmatian, is doing nicely, or that No. 4421, a white puppy with black spots is recovering, but will probably die.

In one cell of the isolation ward, for distemper is highly contagious, is a sick bull pup, so dejected that he doesn't even look up from his white blanket. Distemper has left its mark with sad eyes and a head that will be permanently bent to one side, the result of distemper on his nervous system. Another dog is given to maniacal fits and he howls diabolically for no apparent reason. A huddled brown and grapp puppy trembles with St. Vitus' dance.

Most of the cases prove fatal. Like influenza, distemper develops into pneumonia, which is as serious to the dog world as it is to the human. The temperature mounts into a fever, nose runs and eyes grow watery. Life seems such a record as that of Scotland Yard last year. During 1922 not one murderer in the metropolitan area of London escaped detection.

CZECHO-SLOVAKS
VISIT NATIVE LAND
Prague Office Manager Expects More Than 50,000 will Travel This Summer.

(Montreal Gazette.)
That between 50,000 and 75,000 natives of Czechoslovakia, who are now settled in Manitoba, South Dakota and Nebraska, will make a visit to their native land this summer is the opinion of Mr. Rudolph Steiner, general manager of the White Star-Dominion Line, Prague office, who was in the city yesterday, after returning from an extended tour of Canada and the United States.

The number of Czechoslovaks settled in the Western Provinces and States is stated to be exceptionally large, and the fact that they make good citizens can be gauged from the fact that in the State of Nebraska there are now six representatives of Czechoslovakian nationality in the legislative body of the State.

The White Star-Dominion Line is making special arrangements to handle some of the party by way of the St. Lawrence route, a group of which will be accompanied by the Czechoslovakian consul in Nebraska, Mr. Fritz Serpan. Mr. Steiner is of the opinion that each year will see an increasing number of his countrymen emigrating to Canada and the United States, and with the hope of routing this traffic the White Star-Dominion Line are extensively organizing throughout Czechoslovakia, with headquarters in the city of Prague.

The White Star-Dominion Line has a large and attractive office at Prague, in one of the main thoroughfares of the city, staffed with the company's own English-speaking staff.

Olive, chairman of the board of assessors, said this morning that the statements of income returns being received at City Hall in the committee rooms were coming in fast today, though to date the number filed was not up to the number this time last year. Statements actually mailed yesterday will be received.

GRAIN FREIGHTS DROP
The continental grain market apparently is reported slightly doctored at the present time and as a result grain freights have dropped. It was said this morning that the steamer Dunlop Head had come to this port to take a cargo of grain but that freights had dropped to such an extent that the steamer was trying to get a general cargo, which paid better. There have been heavy shipments to France and Belgium, and it is possible this afternoon that the demand, hence the drop in freight rates. However when the demand strengthens the market will pick up.

THE TOWN OF PREVENTION
(Halifax Chronicle)
It is not only in the rural sections that the habit of hermetically sealing our homes, particularly sleeping-rooms, prevails. It is common everywhere, and children are still brought up to deem the "cold night-air" in their bedrooms.

Yet the "cure" for tuberculosis is fresh air, rest and good food. Why not prevent it by the same means? Fresh air at least is within the reach of everybody.

BOBBERY CROWDS
HELP CAPTURE A
THEFT SUSPECT
New York, Feb. 9.—Thousands of persons, homebound by ice in the afternoon, were witnesses of a daring jewelry robbery from the display window of the H. Phillips store, 147 Broadway. Two bandits, believed to have been assisted by a woman look-out, took part. Smashing the window, they seized jewelry valued at $3,600, and fled with it, having prevented an immediate pursuit by wiring the shop door.

Following an exciting chase of five blocks a man describing himself as William F. Driscoll, twenty-four years old, an ex-pugilist, of 344 East Twenty-second street, was captured and, according to the police, made a written confession. The jewelry was not recovered.

Jacob Phillips and Gus Phillips, the proprietors, and their clerks, Harry Ditchik and George Gann, were in the store. Ditchik saw a short, stocky man peering in the window just before they were started by crashing glass where $50,000 in jewelry were on display.

Gus Phillips and Ditchik were near the front of the store and saw Driscoll who had thrown a stone through the window, then said, reach through the jagged hole and scoop up a handful of jewelry. They both drew revolvers but were afraid to shoot for fear of hitting some one in the crowd on the sidewalk. All four of the men in the store ran for the door only to find it wired and it was several moments before they could break it down with their combined weight.

Driscoll, along the Bowery with a crowd of about a thousand, in which a number of revolvers suddenly appeared, in full cry after him. Patrolman Fasciglione, of the Clinton street station, heard the crash of the glass and the noise of the pursuit and joined in the race. The patrolman did not dare use his revolver because of the crowds, but with a burst of athletic strength, he put all his weight in the swing of his right arm and drove Driscoll down unconscious. None of the jewelry was found on the prisoner, who said when he revived that he had dropped it. Witnesses said they had seen him pass it to another man.
