CIVIL SERVICE

COMPETITIONS

What was wanted from the teaching profession was that they should furnish candidates for the necessary positions. The last two appointed were one from Vancouver and one from Charlottetown. This method would prove a vitalizing feature throughout the country. One of the principal criticisms BOARD AND ROOM, piano, telephone against the system was why candidates and good garden. Apply "Saxonhurst," should be examined upon subjects which they were not to use. The an-

> more than the necessary work he did not even know that. A man if he had no resources outside of the service, "would either go to sleep or go to the devil." If he was fairly well educated generally he had swer was that if he did not know any resources for improving himself in his leisure hours. Finally Prof. Shortt said he had been surprised at the few difficulties in making the reform. If the teachers did not supply the raw material they would either have to lower the grades or take the wardheelers of the politicians.

James L. Hughes, of Toronto, gave one of his characteristic lectures before the assembled teachers, the main feature of which was the fund of anecdote and the expressive manner in which they were toid. Mr. Hughes is always impressive, and last night's lecture was no exception to the general rule. "Tendencies in Modern Education" was his subject. All great tendencies were modern, he said, free schools, libraries, women teachers. Froebel had given them the vision. The child was not thought of until recent years. Three great elements were considered necessary in the development of the child, power, skill, charac-ter, and on these all education was based. The new type could not well be tested by examination. The great tendency of to-day was to "kindle" the child at the cen-tre of his power. Then the other powers would come into life. Study the in oul and reveal to him what his natural power was. Habit come within and worked outward. The he thought, would come when dwould give place to joy. The mabegan to do his work truly until faith in himself.

The modern school tried to ma constructive and productive. This was done largely by manual training.

By and bye there would be other methods of testing than by examination. He had no time to tell what the other plan would be, but it would be a better one. Literature under the new way would not be a grind, but a vision. Science would not be a memorizing of facts, but would be applied. History would be a study of the inner life of the people, and music and art would not be neglected. Culture would be a part of it, but not given at the expense of power.

Barnard and Mann gave to the world a great system of free education. In Munich they said that they had given vocational training to the engineers and others, and it was just as necessary that the laborers should have their training. The man who transformed five cents' worth of clay into a five dollar vase gave four dollars and ninety-five cents to his country. The people of Munich gave the children training in all the elements of modern work. The child would be equipped then for his vocation in life. Canada would have to establish technical schools if she would keep pace with other countries. The old tendency was to make all children alike, whereas God made no two alike. Children were not miniature adults. There should be a full, rich, free child life. They should give him all the alike.

joy here that he can get in order to fit him for the struggles which would come The positive elements of human power easier to make a boy "do" than "not do. The new idea of self-control was to fit oneself for the work God intended him to do. The new idea was much better than the old. Pointing out the weaknesses never improved anyone. An ounce of appreciation was worth a pound of fear God Himself was used negatively in th
