His first essay was in the Federal elections of 1900 and his strenuther and brilliant platform work delighted his friends and amazed his foes; and, though not successful in being elected, he had delivered a solar plexus to the stuborn Toryism of the constituency. In the following year he was triumphantly re-turned for the Local Legislature, in which body he quickly found recognition as a young statesman of distinguished talents young statesman of distinguished talents and bound to reach a high position in the public life of the country. In 1904, he again entered the field of Federal politics against his old opponent, Mr. Kaulbach, was elected to the Commons by and was elected to the data and also became recognized as a man of clear and comprehensive mental grasp, clear and comprehensive mental grasp, dool courage, and readiness in debate, so that when he came back for re-election in 1908, his appeal to the electorate was that of an experienced politician who had in 1908, his appeal to the electorate was that of an experienced politician who had won his spurs in the gathering place of the leaders of the nation. He was again successful and during the succeeding Parliamentary session delivered a memorable speech on the fisheries of Nova Sootia, a speech which resulted in the enactment of much valuable legislation in connection with that vastly important industry. During the long and turbulent session of 1907-08, the member from Lunenburg was among those who retorted with cruehing effect upon the gang of Opposition much rakers who week after week flung their lying, unsubstantiated charges of graft at the Government beaches. In the following year he resigned his membership in the Ommons to take up the arduous and important duties of Attorney-General of this Province. In the by-election which followed he was returned by a triumphant majority, despite the utmost efforts of an Opposition maddened by constant defeat, and having no seruples in regard to the agencies and instruments.

Mr. McKim who is widely known for a life work of singular success as a soul winner, and who is rector of one of the largest parishes in the sister city, is a man of fine presence and his addresses have been marked by genuine eloquence. Quiet, persuasive, pleasing in his every utterance, he is bringing one of the sweetest messages of the mission. At the St. Paul's Mission Church, Argyle Street, large numbers of men and women are listening nightly to his words. His appeals last night for immediate decision and commitment of life to Christ met with instant response. Many present professed acceptance, and no one could have gone away uninfluenced. Perhaps never before has been heard the more beautiful presentment of the gospel call as when last evening the St. John preacher said: "We are leaning ever more and more toward the Saviour. We are leaning our balance, it is impossible to recover ourselves. Let us fall into the loving, waiting, everiasting arms." This was the sixth service in which he had taken part during the day, at the outdoor service on Gratton street at nonday he received the sympathetic used the Saviour.
