In purely local news the Star as usual surpassed its cellence as a newspaper that explains its growing circulation. The public is not anxious to invest in waste paper. It wants the news in which it is especi ally interested.

SOCIAL UNREST.

A despatch to the Star yesterda from Chicago stated that two thousand tempt upon the life of the president. The opponents of the resolution took the ground that McKinley repres the capitalist class, and that his life In New York an attempt was made to vote down a similar resolution move luiged in a prolonged chortle over its illeged superiority as a newspaper. And spread over the first page of the same issue, the most prominent feature of the paper, was a fake confession of Czolgoss, taking up space that should have been devoted to legitimate news. The poor old Telegraph.

The Liverpool correspondent of the Timber Trades Journal, says that business is improving and spruce lumber in good demand, with stocks generally being reduced. In New York spruce prices have an upward tendency, and in Boston the advance over old paices is well maintained.

Anarchist Choisean, Being rather busy they will deny themselves that pleasure for the present. This is not a fake journal, anyhow.

Iniversal Sympathy and Denum clation of the Crime of the

The Telegraph says:

The Telegraph says:

"When the British empire was plunged into grief by the close of the great and glorious reign of Queen Victoria the genuine sorrow manifested by all classes in the United States proved to us that they felt our loss as their own. Sympathy can only be repaid with sympathy. There is nothing in the internal condition of the United States, upon whose exuberant prosperity we dwelt only two days ago with justifiable pride, or in their external relations, which could account for the existence of the passions that breed assassins. Assassination and incitement to assassination are pot political but anti-social offences. Those guilty do not strike against a particular form of government, but all organized defence of law and order. In a vast majority of cases the man who presses the trigger is morally less a villain than the owards whose denunciation he translates into action."

The Dally Mail says:

The Daily Mail says:

"President McKinley has been a wise and far-seeing ruler. He was the first to recogn'se clearly the necessity for expansion of the United States. Hisperiod of office will always be famous as the epoch in which the foundation of the American empire began. He is not, perhaps, a great statesman, but is a man of plain, sterling sense."

The Mail thinks that it is notoriety and publicity which the most cases leads a criminal to perpetrate such atrocities and says that if the criminal could be deait with on the spot one great inducement to crime would be removed. There is no reason why rulers, it says, should not be accompanied by one of two armed men, who in such cases would have orders to shoot and shoot at once.

in a meeting of the Federated Union, and was supported by nearly a third of those present. In neither of these cases were the assembled people avowed anarchists. Their action shows that so-called Socialism, however marmless it may appear on the surface, and however sincere some of its advocates may be, is yet in some of its advocates may be, is yet in some of its aspects, as actually revealed, not far removed from anarchy.

But, deeper than all, and more significant and terrible to the thoughtful mind, is the revelation of the strong undercurrent of social unrest beneath the surface of our civilization. A critical time like the present makes it more.
