No Need of Apology

In addition to giving the convicted man a term of ten years in prison, the judge imposed on him the gratuitous punishment of listening to a long speech made for the benefit of the reporters, in which he set forth specifically the reasons for his action. "You needn't of done all that apologisin' fer imposin' on a feller man," said the culprit kindly. "They ain't no hard feelings on my part. I know as well as you do that a man can't hold the job of judge and act the gentleman at the same time."

They live in a wild state in the south of Africa, among the tribs of Bushmen. The name "Bushmen" is an Anglicism of the Dutch word "Bjosc-" man," meaning "man of the woods."

These human telescopes have derived their extraordinary power of vision, according to Mr. Herbert Spencer, through necessity. If it were not for this they must have long are because. have long ago become extinct. They are remarkably small in stature for wild men, and they offer an easy prey for the large, fierce beasts that infest certain parts of southern Africa. And, on account of their diminutive size, they are not able to larger proportioned neighbors. Travellers in the region of the long-sighted Bushmen have reported some truly remarkable feats with the eyes. One day while a European was walking in company with a friendly Bushman the latter suddenly stopped, and pointing ahead in some alarm, exclaimed :

The white man stared until his eyes Thinking that the native must have made mistake, he insisted on going forward, though his companion urged him to retreat. When they had advanced a little further the Bushman again came to a halt, and ab-solutely refused to go on another step, for, as he explained, he could distinguish not

The European, however, still unable to see a lion, much less the cubs, pushed on boldly. When he had advanced a quarter of a mile he saw an object moving slowly along in the distance at the point to which the Bushman had directed his gaze. Still doubting that a human being could possess such marvellous power of vision, he approached nearer, and finally distinguished the form of a lioness making leisurely for a line of forest.

The limit of a man's power of vision is established by necessify. If our existence depended on our ability to see twice as far as we do, this additional power would be acquired by practice. Deerslayer, of "Leather Stocking" fame, surprised every one by his long-sightedness. Probably he could see further than these Bushmen, but he was a fiction character. All woodsmen, and, as a general rule, all persons living an outdoor life, give their eyes practice at long range, which ultimately makes their accuracy of sight seem wonderful to man who never uses his eyes except to read.

Washington, March 4.—Obtuseness Englishmen in appreciating the point of a story was cleverly illustrated to-day, in story was cleverly mustrased to-day, in a yarn spun on a sofa in the story-teller's angle, as one of the corners in the House of Representatives is designated. An American and an Englishman were doing the old country on foot, and at a cross road, they came to a signpost which gave the distance from that point to the nearest town, stating the number of miles in figures. eneath this was the inscription:

The humor of this suggestion was appreciated instantly by the American, who laughed uproariously, while the Englishman's face was as expressional as the chalky cliffs of Dover. After the pair had trudges three or four miles the Englishman suddenly burst into a loud and boisterous

"I suffered for a year with acute rheumatism and after trying everything I could at the drug stores without deriving any benefit, I tried Dr. Manning's German remedy and found in it a complete and permanent cure.

SCAROITY OF AMBER.

Few of the Modern Pretty Pipe-Stems Are of the Real Stuff.

When a man buys a pipe or cigar-holder with a mouthpiece which the dealer declares is amber the chances are ten to one that the purchaser is being deceived. This asbut so clever are the imitations of amber little fear of selling them, as none but an expert can tell the false from the real.

Celluloid and amberine are the cheapest of the imitations, and no dealer would think of recommending them as amber to any one who appeared to know much about what he wanted. But with amberoid it is a different matter, for, as this substance, is made from the amber itself, there is no perceptible difference in its appearance or properties. This is made from small bits of amber ground fine and compressed by
