ton's Despatch to Europe Would Indicate That the President Has Gone Over There Prepared to Force Things—J. I. Garvin Takes a More Researable View of nation and Points Out Why Britain Cannot Afford to Surrender, Even to the Slightest Degree Her Naval

Special cable to The N Y Tribure and St. John Standard

Loudon, Dec. 18.—If, as is generally supposed here. President Wilson is coming to the scase of its merits, the opinion is certainly not held by some supporters of the United States. The decision to delay the navy apperpriation till has produced an excellent effect here, but immediately following Washington despatches attribute to Wilson's advisers the intention. "If Britian insists to rule the waves, the United States to Britain's one if necessary."

No one wishes to believe that Wilson is coming to the peace conference pointing a pistol at Britain's head, but such statements, made at the present time and under the present constitue, a postol at Britain's head, but such statements, made at the present time and under the present circumstances, scarcely add to reasonable discousion. J. I. Garvin, writing in the Observer today, advances a moderate and considered statement of the British attitude, remarking that the two nations are not going to quarrel about the freedom of the seas, but argues that if Germany were sure of a free maritime supply of goods and materials, she could afford to do without a navy hince "the seas, but argues that if Germany were sure of a free maritime supply of goods and materials, she could afford to do without a navy hince "the seas, but argues that if Germany were sure of a free maritime supply of goods and materials, she could afford to do without a navy hince "the seas would serve her instead. If sure of full maritime ourself the seas, but argues that if Germany were sure of a free maritime supply of goods and materials, she could afford to do without a navy hince "the seas, but argues that if Germany were sure of a free maritime supply of goods and materials, she could afford to do without a navy hince "the seas would serve her instead. If sure of full maritime conference may establish. Even not here to the best interests of the world and to the stability of any better that the present time to the state of the world and to the s

New York, Dec. 13—Operations in the stock market today consistently followed the lines of least resistance, average prices and the volume of trading declining almost to lowest levels of the week. Almost 50 per cent. of nominal turnover during the early and intermediate stages of the session was represented by half a dozen issues, all the more speculative variety. United States Steel, Studebaker, Marine preferred and Mxican Petroleum featured the movement and indicated the market's superficial character.
