

the Senator, unless the British North American Act was changed, which would not likely take place. The solution he offered was, that the engineers in each province should form of themselves a corporation. One corporation could then accept the diploma of another corporation as satisfactory for practice. In this way members could practice in any province without having government legislation. There was no reason, thought Senator Casgrain, why such a step should not be taken. He maintained that engineers should take an interest in public affairs, and be ready to accept positions on commissions dealing with the construction of public works, providing such positions were offered. Mr.

G. A. Mountain proposed "The Society," and Mr. Marceau replied in a witty address. "Retiring Officers" was offered by Lt.-Col. Anderson, of Ottawa, and was responded to by Mr. Blackwell, retiring president. The success of the society during the past year had been most gratifying, Mr. Blackwell stated, the membership had
