

17

When he commenced his address at the mass meeting in Sutherland's hall last evening his first attention was directed only to the question of encouragement to the workers there assembled, but before he had finished his remarks he received by him of his friends a most interesting and important meeting in Queens which changed the whole tenor of his remarks and led to a most interesting turn in the campaign. He then spoke of the changes with regard to dredging were made at the Conservative meeting. Dr. Pugsley only heard the merest outline of what was then said, but his reply was so crushing that the speaker, Hazen Baxter, was fain to acquiesce as effectively as it could be possible to do. More than this Dr. Pugsley declared that he would not have been surprised if such proceedings as had been endorsed by him would have answered in the course of a few days the changes which he had so definitely brought against Mr. Baxter. His words were received amid intense silence and at the close his able and