BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS GIVES

For two hours the other day, the British House of Commons discussed taself in amused and sometimes heated fashion.

In committee of supply on the vote for £32,000 to complete the charge for the House of Commons, members debated its ventilation, the state of its dining-rooms, its kitchen, its smoking-rooms, and its habits generally.

smoking-rooms, and its habits generally.

Mr. Wylie, the author of the suggestion that tea should be taxed out of consumption, attacked the system of ventilating the House. The strangers' gallery needed attention, he said, and, the air of the ladies' gallery. Was distinctly impure.

He noticed, however, that members who were very careless about the bacteria in the air took exceptional pains to kill it in the water by adding a killer of Scottish origin.

pans to kill it in the water by acting a killer of Scottish origin.

Major Evans Gordon moved a reduction of the vete by £100, and discussing the telephone system in the House, said he was sometimes shocked by the language to which the deficiencies of the telephone frequently led. quently led. Hard Words.

Hard Words.

He had heard venerable, white-haired members at the telephones—(cries of "Name?")—using language which was not even heard during a Parliamentary golf handicap—language which teachers of morality ought not to use in the presence of a drayman, let alone young girls and boys.

John Campbell inveigned against the ladies' grill, as the fretwork screen in front of the ladies' gallery is called. What did the ladies say of this monstrosity? It was not easy to obtain their opinion.

About half a century ago a valiant member undertook a plebiscite, and catchised about 400, but it was not certain that he survived to tell the tale.

Mr. Campbell asked whether Lord Balcarres (who officiates for the First Commissioner of Works) would go upstairs and repeat the experiment. But Lord Balcarres shook his head,

But Lord Balcarres shook his head, and the committee laughed.

"At any rate," said Mr. Campbell, "we might instal the annunciate. I have heard of poor ladies sitting for several hours in the gallery, and going away without knowing the names of the members they had been listening to." At this there were cries of "Shocking!" and "A good thing for the members! thing for the members!'

Common Sense.

H. C. Richards discussed the question of ventilation in what he called commonsense way.

"Here we are," said Mr. Richards, "from 3 o clock to 5 o clock in a all-swoon from the oppressive state with a timesphere. But where we can down after our climers at 9 clock the air, is ninble and sweet, why is that? It is suite an affair of commonsense."

why is that? It is quite an affair of commonsense.

"Open a wind w, sir, and out goes our depression of in comes commonsense. That is why the House is so refreshing after 9 o'clock, and why it is not refreshing from 3 to 5.

"I am not a scientlyst," added Mr. Richards, amid peals of laughter, "but I am a man of chimmonsense." Mr. Richards denied that the House was the finest club in the world, as william Redmond had said it was.

"I never said so, Mr. Sp.—Lowther," declared W. Redmond.

"All I can say about it," continued Mr. Richards, "is that it is a bad club, and very expensive."

The Parties Condemned.

The committee seemed slightly shocked when Mr. Richards was discovered saying, "As for the ladies—by the ladies shift for themselves."

shocked when Mr. Richards was discovered saying, "As for the ladies—let the ladies shift for themselves," and he followed this by pointing out that "this House does not exist for dining the giving tea-parties on the terms." It is to the smooth voice of Dr. Farquharson, who asked for the appointment of "a small committee, with powers to add to its number," to take the views of the ladies in the gallery as to their personal comfort. "Most of us, Mr. Lowther," continued Dr. Farquharson, "are usually sitting doing nothing. Personally I am glad there is a little social entertainment to relieve our inertia," and the hon gentleman promised Mr. Richards that if he were invited to dine with him he should certainly accept the invitation.

to dine with him he should certainly accept the invitation.

Mr. Werr believed that most of the microbes found in the atmosphere of the House were brought in on the boots of members. He suggested, amid laughter, that two Japarese girls should be brought over to remove outdoor footgear as members entered the precincts and replace their boots by slippers in accordance with the Japanese custom.

The Grill.

The Grill.

Lord Balcarres said even in regard to the ventilation of the House he felt like the old man and his donkey. It was impossible to satisfy everyone. He did not think the removal of the ladies' grill would be popular; but the supply of annunciators was under consideration.

A sharp passage of arms occurred between Sir H. Seton-Karr and W. Redmond. Sir Hehry had said, referring to a suggestion for the utilization of the Irish during room for smoking purposes after dinner, that he disliked the Irish flavor which lingered about the room.

To this W. Redmond took the strongest possible objection. Sir Henry disclaimed intention of giving offence, but Mr. Redmond said the expression showed the estimation in which Irish members were held by certain Unionists.

The committee divided on the amendment, which was rejected by 343 to 158. The vote was then agreed to.

FLEMING-STEPHENSON. A very pretty house wedding tool place Monday evening at seven o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McWhimmey, 32 Albany Rufus Stephenson, Collector of Customs, of this city, and sister of Mrs. McWhinney, was married to Mr James Fleming. Rev. Mr. Sims, formerly of Holy Trinity and now of the Church of the Messiah, officiated, and Miss Nellie Campbell, daughter of Arch. Campbell, M. P., played the wedding marches. The best man was Mr. James Sutherland, and the bridesmaid Miss Kathleen O'Hara. The little flower girl was Miss Beatrice Goodeve, Ottawa, mece of the bride. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Sydney Stepheuson, and looked very handsome in a beautiful gown of white Chantilly lace, over chiffon and silk, elbow sleeves, with deep frills of lace. The long tulle veil was held with orange blossoms, and she carried an exquisite shower poquet of lilies of the valley and sparagus fern: About fifty guests were present, the majority of whom were former Chathamites. Among a large array of presents were three cases of silver, from the mother, brothers and sisters of the groom, Scotland, handsome furniture, cut glass, and some substantial cheques. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond and sapphire ring; to the bridesmaid and flower girl, pearl brooches; and to the best man, pearl scarf pin. The bride's travelling gown was a stylish blue etamine. elaborately trimmed with black, the blouse toat opening over a blouse of white silk. A white hat trimmed with folds of green and white wings

The condition on which Chatham won the lacrosse game from St. Thomas was superior fitness. Many of Chatham's backers had the fit at the beginning of the game.

"Yes," said the resident in the vicinity of the G. T. R. hogs pens to the Crown Attorney, "the odors from this source are horrible and must be put flown. That's the sent-i-ment."

The football club should be able to get good material for their team from those who live in the neighbor-hood of the Head street spur or the G. T. R. hog pens. These citizens ought to be in pretty good condition in the fall to join any aggregation of kickers.

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT.

The St. Thomas Times says:—St. Thomas went down to defeat yesterday at Chatham by the score of 6 to 5. Between fifteen and eighteen hundred saw the game, which proved to be very exciting at all stages. St. Thomas seemed to have the game won until the third quarter, the score standing 4 to 1 in their favor. Then when Chatham in the third quarter scored four goals in rapid succession, making fit 5 to 4 in Chatham's favor, the crowd went wild with joy. One couldn't hear himself speak during the mext ten mautes for the crowd veglting, the band playing, the young boys trying to kick down the grand stand, and the rooters on the opposite side of the field, led by Mr. Stone, a prominent merchant, yelling THE OTHER SIDE OF IT. posite side of the field, led by Mr. Stone, a prominent merchant, yelling out the goals for Chatham in order—1, 2, 3, 4, 5. But Ramer, Hlythe and Lount stopped the wild excitement. They did some very neat stick handling and based from one to another, and finally Ramer made a lovely shot and scored. The crowd seemed to die all at once and not a word was heard from the Chathamites, Ramer's goal making the score 5 to Rumer's goal making the score 5 to All of the last quarter and for ten minutes of the third quarter St. Thomas was old and one man short, as, Lawlor was put out for thirty minutes for hitting McFarlaine over the head, which he Fightly deserved, as he started to play drifty the first five minutes of the game, and finally hit the wrong man and got it back. ing for a white after the score was tied, but St. Thomas having one man short—and a good one at that—were up against hig odds. Finally Carter, who played a star game for Chatham, shot the deciding goal, making the score 6 to 5, as it stood at the flaish. It support from the people will win games, then Chatham should never lose a game. The crowd cheered the players on from start to finish. The Citizens' Band was in attendance and added greatly to the noise-making. St. Thomas should have a band at some of the games here to let the visitors know that we are alive. Our lacrosse team is a winner even if it was defeated yesterday, but it was just a little hard luck, and all the boys put up a star game. It was the crowd that won for Chatham, not superfor playing. Any man can chilat hatter when he has lots of supporters, and the Chathamites had quenty and they all seemed to have good lungs—especially the fair sex. The St. Thomas Journal: — The first game between St. Thomas and Chatham, in the Intermediate series, took place yesterday on the grounds of the latter, and after a supreme struggle in the sand the wearers of the green and red were defeated by a score of six goals to five. It was like unto a balloon ascension, and when the Chatham contingent were so far up in the air that it tooked as if they were doomed to remain in cloudland, the parachute opened, and, grasping their opportunity, they rushed down the pike and poured in a sufficient number of emots to even up the score, both to the surprise of themselves and also the spectators.

Of the game Itself it cannot be said that it was brilliant. The surface of the grounds was much too soft for accurate guaging of the ball, and consequently a great ambount of hice stick handling was not noticed. But what the play lacked in science was abundantly made up in excitement.

The Chathamites are very enthusiastic over their lacrosse, team and over 2,000 of them journeyed out to Agricultural park, accompanied by
