L. BLACK & CO'S Spheroidal Spectacles AND EYE GLASSES ARE the best for the preservation of the sight, and took the medal at the Centennial Exhibition. The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect polish and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer. The eye being the most delicate organ great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately. To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Optometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed. Call and examine before purchasing any other kind. A full Stock in Steel, Rubber, and Gold Frames and prices to suit all pockets. S. F. SHUTE, Watchmaker and Jeweler. Sole Agent for Fredericton and vicinity. Aug. 28.

IVANHOE. (BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.) CHAPTER XX. [CONTINUED.] In this humor of passive resistance, and with his garment collected beneath him, Isaac sat in a corner of his dungeon, where his folded hands, his dishevelled hair and beard, his furred cloak and high cap, seen by the wiry and broken light, would have afforded a study for Rembrandt, had that celebrated painter existed at the period. The Jew remained without altering his position for nearly three hours, at the expiry of which steps were heard on the dungeon stairs. The bolts screamed as they were withdrawn—the hinges creaked as the wicket opened, and Reginald Front-de-Bœuf, followed by the two Saracen slaves of the Templar, entered the prison.

Front-de-Bœuf, a tall and strong man, whose life had been spent in public war or in private feuds and broils, and who had hesitated at no means of extending his feudal power, had features corresponding so his character, and which strongly expressed the fiercer and more malignant passions of the mind. The scars with which his visage was seamed would, on features of a different cast, have excited the sympathy and veneration due to the marks of honorable valor; but in the peculiar case of Front-de-Bœuf they only added to the general ferocity of his countenance, and to the dread which his presence inspired. This formidable baron was clad in a leathern doublet, fitted close to his body, with stains from his armor. He had no weapon excepting a poniard at his belt, which served to counterbalance the weight of the bunch of rusty keys at his right side.

The black slaves who attended Front-de-Bœuf were stripped of their gorgeous apparel, and attired in jerkins and trousers of very coarse linen, their sleeves being tucked up above the elbow, like those of butchers when about to exercise their functions in the slaughter house. Each had in his hand a small pannier; and, when they entered the dungeon, they stopped at the door until Front-de-Bœuf himself had carefully locked and relocked it. Having taken this precaution, he advanced slowly up the apartment toward the Jew, upon whom he kept his eye fixed, as if he wished to paralyze him with his glance, as some animals are said to fascinate their prey. It seemed indeed as if the sullen and malignant eye of Front-de-Bœuf possessed some portion of that supposed power over his unfortunate prisoner. The Jew sat with his mouth a-gape and his eyes fixed on the savage Baron, with such earnestness of terror, that his frame seemed literally to shrink together, and to diminish in size while encountering the fierce Norman's fixed and baleful gaze. The poor, unhappy Isaac was deprived not only of the power to rise and make the necessary obeysance which his terror dictated, but he could not utter a word of supplication; so strongly was he agitated by the conviction that torture and death were impending over him.

On the other hand, the stately form of the Norman appeared to dilate in magnitude, like that of the eagle, which ruffles up its plumage when about to pounce on its defenceless prey. He paused within three steps of the corner in which the unfortunate Jew had now, as it were, coiled himself up into the smallest possible space, and made a sign for one of the slaves to approach. The black scullion came forward accordingly, and producing from his basket a large pair of scales and several weights, he laid them at the foot of Front-de-Bœuf, and again retired to the respectful distance, at which his companion had already taken his station.

The motions of these men were slow and solemn, as if there impended over their souls some pre-conception of horror and of cruelty. Front-de-Bœuf himself opened the scene by thus addressing his ill-fated captive: "Most accursed dog of an accursed race," he said, "awaking with his deep and sullen voice the sullen echoes of its dungeon vault, 'seest thou these scales?' The unhappy Jew returned a feeble affirmative. "In these very scales shalt thou weigh me out," said the relentless Baron, "a thousand silver pounds, after the just measure and weight of the Tower of London. 'Holy Abraham!' returned the Jew, finding voice through the very extremity of his danger, 'heard man ever such a demand? Who ever heard, even in the minstrel's tale, of such a sum as a thousand pounds of silver? What human sight was ever blessed with the vision of such a mass of treasure? Not within the walls of York, ransack my house and that of all my tribe, wilt thou find the tithe of that huge sum of silver that thou speakest of?' 'I am reasonable,' answered Front-de-Bœuf, 'and if silver be scant, I refuse not gold. At the rate of a mark of gold for each six pounds of silver, thou shalt free thy unbelieving carcass from such punishment as thy heart has never even conceived.' 'Have mercy on me, noble knight!' exclaimed Isaac, 'I am old, and poor, and helpless. It were unworthy to triumph over me—it is a poor deed to crush a worm.' 'Odst thou mayest be,' replied the knight; 'more shame to thy folly who have suffered thee to grow gray in usury and knavery. Feeble thou mayest be, for when had a Jew either heart or hand. But rich it is well known thou art.' 'I swear to you, noble knight,' said the Jew, 'by all which I believe, and by all which we believe in common—' 'Perjure not thyself,' said the Norman, interrupting him, 'and let not thine obstinacy seal thy doom, until thou hast seen and well considered the fate that awaits thee. Think not I speak to thee, only to excite thy terror, and practise on the base cowardice thou hast derived from thy tribe. I swear to thee by that which thou dost not believe, by the gospel which our church teaches, and by the keys which are given her to bind and to loose, that my purpose is deep and peremptory. This dungeon is no place for trifling. Prisoners ten thousand times more distinguished than thou have died within these walls, and their fate hath never been known! But for thee is reserved a long and lingering death, to which theirs were luxury.' He again made a signal for the slaves to approach, and spoke to them apart, in their own language; for he also had been in Palestine, where, perhaps, he had learnt his lesson of cruelty. The Saracens produced from their baskets a quantity of charcoal, a pair of bellows, and a flask of oil. While the one struck a light with a flint and steel, the other disposed the charcoal in the large rusty grate which we have already mentioned, and exercised the bellows until the fuel came to a red glow. 'Seest thou, Issac,' said Front-de-Bœuf, 'the range of iron bars above that glowing charcoal?—on that warm couch thou shalt die, stripped of thy clothes as if thou wert to rest on a bed of down. One of these slaves shall maintain the fire beneath thee, while the other shall anon thy wretched limbs with oil, lest the roast should burn. Now, choose betwixt such a scorching bed and the payment of a thousand pounds of silver; for, by the hand of my father, thou hast no other option.' 'It is impossible,' exclaimed the miserable Jew—'it is impossible that your purpose can be real! The good God of nature never made a heart capable of exercising such cruelty!' 'Trust not to that, Isaac,' said Front-de-Bœuf, 'it were a fatal error. Dost thou think that I, who have seen a town sacked, in which thousands of my Christian countrymen perished by sword, by flood, and by fire, will blench from my purpose for the outcries or screams of one single wretched Jew?—or thinkest thou that these swarthy slaves, who have neither law, country, nor conscience, but their master's will—who use the poison, or the stake, or the poniard, or the cord, at his slightest wink—think est thou that they will have mercy, who do not even understand the language in which it is asked? Bewise, old man; discharge thyself of a portion of thy superfluous wealth: repay to the hands of a Christian a part of what thou hast acquired by the usury thou hast practised on those of his religion. Thy cunning may soon swell out once more thy shrivelled purse, but neither leech nor medicine can restore thy scorching hide and flesh wert thou once stretched on these bars. Tell down thy ransom, I say, and rejoice that at such rate thou canst redeem thee from a dungeon, the secrets of which few have returned to tell. I waste no more words with thee—choose between thy cross and thy flesh and blood, and as thou choosest, so shall it be.' [TO BE CONTINUED.]
