The Little Vanities.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"None have more pride than those who dream that they have none. You may labor against vain glory until you conceive that you are humble, and the fond conceit of your humility will prove to be pride in full bloom."—Spurgeon.

What are you the most conceited about? Someone plumped that question into a silence in one of our afternoon chats on the veranda the other evening and the resulting conversation was most interesting. Try it some time. If you can get people to be honest you will get some worth-while sidelights of character.

People are seldom proud of the things they have the most obvious reason to be pleased with.

The Strange Things People Are Vain Of.

The brainy man or woman frequently takes less pride in his mental ability than in some minor accomplishment or perhaps some single physical beauty.

Do you remember, in "Little Women," how Jo, the clever member of the family (and presumably the plainest), wept bitterly the night her mother was called to her sick father's bedside, and when her sister, assuming that she was worried about him tried to comfort her, she confessed that it was really because she had tried to help out the family finances by selling her one beauty, her splendid mane of chestnut hair.

That little human touch was one of the many that make that wonderful book so real and so beloved.

Tell Her What Wonderful Endurance She Has.

One of the confessions our talk brought forth was from a successful person who would sacrifice the larger for own way in the business world since she was sixteen, who is an excellent pianist and a fine housekeeper. But the thing she is most proud of is her endurance as a pedestrian. She has a walk of eighteen miles to her credit and she is more pleased to be told that there aren't many women over thirty-five who could walk as far in a day than at any other compliment.

Another was from a writer who is more proud of his tennis game than of any of his books or the honorary college degrees he has received. The two things that it pleases me most to be complimented upon are my skill at darning stockings and my horseback riding.

Perhaps They Take Some Praise For Granted.

Of course I don't mean that these people would sacrifice the larger for the lesser gift. Perhaps when you analyze the subject they are not really more proud of the lesser, only they have come to take praise and admiration for the larger for granted, and therefore are more pleased by compliments on the less obvious accomplishment.

In any case it is interesting to watch for these little weaknesses. Even without badly bringing the subject up you can detect them by watching for them. The socially clever woman does not need to be told this, she always knows what everyone's weak spot in the vanity line is and plays upon it.

Paris Commemorates Second Anniversary

Of Germany's Declaration of War on Russia.

Paris, August 1.—To-day, the second anniversary of Germany's declaration of war on Russia, was commemorated in the French press by special articles and features. A number of messages were printed from prominent personalities in allied and neutral countries, including the Kings of Serbia and Montenegro, Admiral Jellicoe, General Sir Sam Hughes, Eilhu Root, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, General Cadorna, Premier Romanones, of Spain, General Alexieff, Chief of the Russian Staff and the Russian and Belgian premiers.

General Alexieff says: "I think that we may now be said to have passed through the most difficult period of our great war. While still offering stubborn resistance our enemy is beginning to weaken, but we have need to summon all our powers yet before we can hope to attain the definite goal of our hopes."

Premier Sturmer, of Russia, says:—"At the moment when the allies are entering upon the third year of the war the Russian government is more than ever resolved to continue the struggle to the end, and is firmly convinced that, with the help of the Almighty, the allies and the cause of justice and equity will triumph."

Everyday Etiquette.

"Will you please tell me which is the correct side for a gentleman to walk when going down stairs with a lady?" asked Frank.

"The gentleman usually walks to the right of the lady, unless he can assist her or protect her by walking on the left," answered the professor.

BILLIARDS.
Billiards is a pleasing substitute for the two-mile run which has practically the same effect upon the legs, causing them to droop wearily toward the southwest and wobble in their orbit like a shooting star. It is a very healthful form of exercise, and is specially recommended for the use of exhausted business men who are trying to work up enough ambition to tackle the lawn mower.

There was a time when billiards was looked upon by the clergy as a snare of the devil, but since it has been introduced to the Y. M. C. A. and the parlors of the church it is considered no more harmful than the annual raffle for the pipe-organ fund. Some mothers and fathers go so far as to say that they would rather have their boys play billiards in the church than in some basement pool hall with a blind pig in connection, thus establishing proof of the doctrine of total depravity. If every church in the country had a billiard room for its boys, presided over by one of the brethren who at some time or other was a fourteen-carat boy himself, there would be fewer poker games running at full blast in the lumber yards and along the river banks of our small towns.

Billiards is played by poking ivory balls around on a table and trying to make them connect with one eye scowled into an agonizing squint. There's only one kind of physical exercise which calls more muscles of the body into play than billiards, and that is sawing wood, but owing to the scarcity of cord wood men are driven to playing billiards. Most men would prefer to saw a cord of wood before breakfast and their wives would prefer to have them, but our standing timber is too precious to be thus wasted.

While science helps a man to play billiards, it is not positively necessary. A rangy, muscular player who has horseshoes bulging out of both hip pockets and enjoys a stand-in with Providence is more dangerous to meet than a fat man who is on roller skates for the first time. Thousands of men are playing billiards every day, when they ought to be shooting craps for a living.

Billiards is like the patent medicine which is 92 per cent alcohol—it is all right except when used as a beverage. The man who learns how to gallop around a billiard table for an hour and then remembers that he has business to look after will have something to leave his family besides sad regrets and a mortgaged future.

KEP MINARD'S LINIMENT IN THE HOUSE.

THE DANGER CAR.

The auto, as a grim destroyer, is difficult to beat. Just yesterday I killed a lawyer, while scorching up the street. When first I got my car I uttered a vow that I'd go slow. "This speeding mania," I muttered, "is what brings death and woe." But I got going fast and faster, like many another scout, and now there's always a disaster, whenever I go out. When home I come from some brief journey, my wife asks, "Who was slain?" I say, "Three clerks and an attorney he dead upon the plain." I go kerwhooing every morning, o'er valley, weald and wold, all rules and regulations scorning, I knock the records cold. A cloud of dust, a roar and rattle, and I'm beyond your ken, as deadly as a modern battle, a menace to all men. The rural cops would like to pinch me, but can't get close enough; some day a bunch of men will lynch me, and that will be the stuff. And while for such a stunt they hanker, I'm scorching, far and near, to-day I crumpled up a banker, and maimed an auctioneer.

Liquid Catarrh Remedies Useless Only Believe—Never Cure.

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the linings of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsam right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace presents a four reel feature to-day: "Gladiola" is a beautiful story of countryside life and love touched with tragedy, featuring Viola Dana, the sweetest girl on the screen with Robert Connors and Pat O'Malley in four remarkable acts. Bill Parsons, the Broadway Prince of Comedies, features in "Little Brown Hen," a clever and very laughable comedy. Professor McCarthy will play a special programme of music: "In Love Land," "Siam," "There's a Garden in Old Italy," the latest New York one steps, and Sidney Barnes beautiful waltzes: "Destiny," "Mystery," "Loyalty," etc., etc.

The War

Last week was memorable for the opening of the third year of the war. Naturally, we read many articles on the past and prognosis of the future. The latter concerned us and we note, amid wide differences of opinion in detail, a general agreement among the best writers: they say that it will not be time yet, possibly a year or more before Germany and Austria are completely beaten, but that the initiative so entirely rests with the Allies that eventual defeat is German opinion, so far as we are necessarily guarded. The reliance, beyond doubt, is being put up of all attempts on their line, leading to the possibility by our Allies of Germany's ability and their willingness to end, to treat for peace.

The military situation of last week by few outstanding but it shows definite and progress. The offensive has not been interrupted on any front, and sides seem to be taking a "breather," which we may only a prelude to the most activity. Each week brings us nearer. On the West, in particular, the pace cannot be held for long at such a thing must crack.

On the Somme, while progress to record, the has been of the greatest importance favourable to the Allies, and finally in the hands of the Allies, but there are some outstanding which must yet be taken. The position has its full value, the most important fighting on in the French sector, Comblès and Clery. The in a sense the key to the offensive, for its possession would give the Allies the control of the Bapaume-Verdun road. At one point, the British held it against furious repeated counter-attacks. While for continued and violent along this area, for the British will shortly make a determined effort to capture the vital third line of German trenches. They have done so ready in taking the first step in so many places. The news tells of the capture of a large of the German second line, Pozieres, which will greatly aid the British position. We were reminded of this more by the announcement that French had retaken Fleury, resisted the most desperate of the Germans to win it back. Nothing could be so cant, for if the Crown Prince has been sufficiently demoralized to allow the French definitely to take the offensive, the victory will be patent to all the eyes. We shall soon see if this is so. Another point worthy of carrying out of raids by the Germans and others at other points of the line, quite considerable themselves and useful reminders of the danger of the Germans of the danger of men to the Somme front. We are surprised if these
