He thinks the epileptiform madness which controls him is traceable not so much to the fact that Thaw's aunt died mad, as faher, who by superhuman work in a few millionaire. He argues in support of this that history demonstrates that the children of persons who exhaust their energies by enormous work are aften either moralbad or imbeciles.

"'In giving my impressions of the Thaw case,' begins Dr. Lombroso, 'I must, not having made any physical examination of the young man, and not having heard any oral testimony, reserve to myself the right

"The criminologist, after reciting the circumstances surrounding the commission of the murder in Madison Square Garden, then continues:

"'In the Cafe Martin, on the day before the murder, Thaw's notice was attracted by an unusual display of emotion on the part of his wife, who, replying to his inquiry as to the cause, said: "That pig is here." This reference was to Stanford White, and, it would appear, had been the last circumstance in determining the crime which was to follow. "But even if this last meeting was doubtful, it was nevertheless certain that Thaw and his wife were displaying unmistakable evidences of hatred mixed with distrust and apprehension concerning no hand touches it.
