AND PROFISCANTISM (New York Englished School of)

New York Sancry ressing his surprise If it Rollop Dome the lead of the I prompate in dioce. of Albany, should regard the Opiscopahan Church as having more in common with the vario's Profestant sects than it has with the Catholic Church To us Catholics the surprising thing is that the High ; Church man who takes Bishop Doane to task should be surprised Between the sects and the Episcopal Church there exists the common bond established by the denial of the supremacy of the See of Rome.

We believe that Bishop Doane states a self-evident truth when he says: "Speaking humanly and so far as we can see, is it not a self-evident transferred, and went back to the fact that we have far more in common, in all our religious thoughts and faith, with the Protestant than with the Roman world, with historic Press by terianism, for instance, than with the Papacy."

Commenting on this the High Churchman, whose letter appears in The New York Sun, says that he and other High Churchmen were brought up to believe that the true church consisted of three branches, unfortunately separated, namely, the Roman Cathohe Church, the Episcopal Church and the Greek Church, for whose reunion one ought to pray. He adds that surely this reunion will come in God's ed charming in castor broadcloth tails own good time, in fulfillment of Christ's prayer "that they all may be one, as we are one." Holding this opinion, the High Churchmen in the Episcopal Church logically must take the same view of the Protestan sects The Sun's correspondent does when he says that the Episcopal Church is "really not Protestant and had nothing to do with Protestantism; that the organized societies of Presbyterians. Baptists, etc., were only so many thieves and robbers (ecclesiastically) trying to 'climb up come other way' and that as the Episcopal Church, being really Catholic and having nothing whatever Millard's Ave Maria in charming in common with such societies, denied manner. William Melody sang an of- their orders and never recognized the ceremony the guests adjourned to upon them as schismatics and here-

> To Episcopalians holding views of this kind it must be a great shock to hear an Episcopalian Bishop declare that the Church in which he is a Bishop has more in common with Presbyterianism, Methodism and other Protestans sects than with the Catholic Church. Such a declaration as this should have the effect of setting sincere and thoughtful Episcopalians to examining the claims of the Episcopal Church.

A MODEL YOUNG IRISHMAN.

In a recent lecture in Toronto, Mr. J. W Flatelle described a young Irishman whose character we would hold up as a model to the average young man, whether Irish or Canadian born. Mr. Flavelle said: A young Irishman came to Canada not many years ago to make a start in life. He drifted around for some time, and at last a friend went to the manager of a bank in Hamilton and asked him to make a place for the young Irishman. He did so, and a few days later the new clerk took a stand at one of the desks. He was of a most inquisitive character, and caused more or ess trouble by continually enquiring as to the whys and wherefores of every unusual transaction. He was not contented at one post, but frequently would go to the manager and sa). "I wish you would let me change places with Smith for a while. I want to find out how his work is done." His wishes were granted when practicable, and the result was that in a very short time he had a good general experience and was the most valuable man in the office.

At last a request came from the general manager for a clever, reliable young man to get for him in a pritate capacity. He would require to have aborthand and he able to use A typewriter The position was not to be filled at once, the manager was merely to be on the lookout for a right man. So the young frishman and another clerk were told that the one who could operate the typewriter and write shorthand the better after a certain time would be recommended for the position. The Irishman outstripped his competitor through diligent work night and day, and accordingly went to Toronto to fill the position. From here he was sent to New Yor's, where his desire for work took shape in the teaching of a night school. Then he was appointed inspector of a bank at Montreal. He is: still a young men, but a short time ago, when the directors of a banking institution wanted a general manage nive made by Davis & Lawronce Co. lor, they laid their hands upon the young Irishman

A dividend of 6 per cent, was paid on the Subscribed Capital of the Company in 1901, and the same declared for the present year. Your Directors did not make any effort to dispose of the uncalled shares (as authorized by you at last general meeting), as our surplus was sufficient for the present, but, considering our phenomenal progress, we may find it incumbent to do so this year.

Before closing this report, we would again cordially thank our Agents for their continued support and loyalty, knowing our future prosperity (as well as in the past) is largely due to the caution and judgment exercised by them We believe we have a staff far above the average.

He thought himself too rough to deal with the gentler sex. His confessional at S. Sulpice was literally besieged by every specimen of tough-looking Parisian. The presence of the unkempt, unshorn and ranged customers aided somewhat to keep the women at a respectable distance.

One day, however, a good old woman, who probably did not know of the father's specialty, walked right up into the Lox much ahead of the open-Ale and Porter have been awarded the jing time and before the arrival of any of the ordinary class of penitents When the confessor arrived and pushed back the slide he jumped at the sight of the old honnet and worn-out shawl. "That does not make a bit of dif-ference," answered the old lady, "since I am here and ready, and you are ready likewise, you'll shrive me as well as anybody else."

"It is impossible, my good lady, if my men see that I hear women, they'll just leave me in the lurch. He kind enough to go to some one else." "Ah! that's the way," aya she, getting op; "well, I guess I will go,

PETER'S PENCE.

The Rome correspondent of The Catholic Tinves: It is well known that as the Sovereign Pontiff, following the example of his predecessor Plus JX., has always refused to accept the yearly sum of £140,000 apportioned to the Holy Sec by that monstrous make-believe of legality known as the "Law of Gustantees," the principal source of the Holy See's revenue, with which the numerous needs of the Church throughout the world and the expenses of the Papal Court have to be met, is the "Obolo di San Pietro," or Peter's Pence. It is therefore not without a very justifiable feeling of anxiety, almost amounting to alarm, that the Papal Commission of the Obolo have noticed a steady decrease in the Peter's Pence offerings. The annual report for the year 1901, submitted by Cardinal Mocenni to the Pontiff the other day, shows that the total outcome of the Obolo only amounted to 2,301,000 lire, or £92,040, representing barely one-third of the average before 1870. France, formerly one of the most generous contributors to the Obolo, now figures at the end of the list, after Great Britain and the United States! Italy comes first with £12,440, Austria second with £10,600, the United States a good third with 29,960. Then follow Germany (£8,-5207, Spain (£8,080), Great Britain (7,760), Belgium (£6,520), and other countries for the total amount of £27,960. The only satisfactory symptom in this list is the indication of the enormous strides recently made by Catholicism in English speaking coun tries, and especially in the United States. I am informed that the Holy Father will shortly appoint a committee of Cardinals to study the question of the alarming decrease in the Obolo, and that an appeal will be made to the Faithful throughout the world in a Papal document now in course of preparation. One thing is certain, namely, that if the present falling-off in the output of Peter's Pence continues for a few years longer, the Holy See will be unable to make both ends meet.
