Canada has never had a revolution but it has had a number of rebellions. The leaders, William Lyon Mackenzie, center, of Upper Canada, Louis Joseph Papineau of Lower Canada and Louis Riel of the Prairies, were driven into exile.

The uprisings of the Métis in 1870 and 1885 were the most sustained. Riel, who was only 25 in 1870, and his council had set up a provisional government and reached an agreement with Ottawa that would have admitted the new province of Manitoba to the Confederation. Unfortunately, Riel had ordered the execution of Thomas Scott, a violent young Ontario Orangeman. The Canadian government sent out a punitive expedition (lower right) and Riel fled to the United States. When he returned to lead the second uprising he was captured and executed.

Mackenzie (whose grandson would be Prime Minister) and Papineau also came home and they rebelled no more. In time the three men became national heroes.
