

defensive works.—Expedition of Duvivier to Canso, &c.—Governor Shirley proposes to attack Louisbourg.—His plans disapproved of by the council, but welcomed by the people of New England, and adopted.—Colonel Pepperel and admiral Warren, with land and sea forces, invest the place.—Mutiny in the garrison.—Mr. Vaughan makes a bold and successful night assault, and destroys garrison stores.—Capitulation of Louisbourg; the settlers taken to France.—Project for invading Canada.—The duke d'Anville's expedition, and the work cut out for it to perform.—Of the disasters which attended it from first to last; the duke dies of chagrin, and his successor in command kills himself.—M. de Ramsay menaces Annapolis.—Part of his men attack and defeat colonel Noble and a corps of New-Englanders, at Grand-Pré-aux-Mines.—The American frontiers invaded in many places, and the country ravaged.—Sea-fight near Cape Finisterre, and another at Belle-Isle; the French defeated in both.—Count de la Galissonnière appointed interim governor of New France; the previous nominee, M. Jonquière, being a prisoner in England.—Troubles with the Miâmis.—Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, and its conditions.—Concluding reflections on the past war. . . . . 99

CHAPTER III.

THE FRONTIERS' COMMISSION.—1748—1755.

The peace of Aix-la-Chapelle only a truce.—Britain profits by the ruin of the French war-marine to extend the frontiers of her possessions in America.—M. de la Galissonnière governor of Canada.—His plans to hinder the neighbouring colonies from aggrandizing themselves, adopted by the court.—Pretensions of the British.—Rights of discovery and possession of the French.—The liminary policy of Galissonnière expounded and defended.—Emigration of the Acadians; part taken in their regard by that governor.—He causes several forts to be raised in the west; founding of Ogdensburgh (1749).—The Marquis de la Jonquière succeeds as governor; the French ministry directs him to adopt the policy of his predecessor.—De la Corne and Major Lawrence advance to the Acadian isthmus, and occupy strongholds thereon; i.e., forts Beauséjour, Gaspereaux, Lawrence, Des Mines, &c.—Lord Albemarle complains, at Paris, of French encroachments (1749); reply thereto of M. Puyzieulx.—The French, in turn, complain of British hostile acts on sea.—The Acadians take refuge in St. John's (Prince Edward's) Island; their miserable condition there.—Foundation of Halifax, N.S. (1749).—A mixed commission, French and British, appointed to settle disputes about the frontier lines;