

CONTENTS.

XV

PAGE

ron and —Agri- Wild- itage in Colonial 17	Mackenzie Comes to the Surface.—Rolph, Baldwin, and Bidwell.—Events Preceding the Rebellion.—The So-called Family Compact.—Sir Francis Bond Head Appears on the Scene.—Sedition in Lower Canada.—Craig, Ryland, Neilson.—Character of Sir George Prevost.—Views of Pierre Bédard.—The French Character of the Assembly Made Gradually Complete.—Rivalry Between it and the “English” Council.—Lord Dalhousie Tries to Control the Rising Tide of Conflict.—Prolonged and Bitter Controversies.—Race Feeling the Chief Issue Cultivated by L. J. Papineau.—Kempt, Aylmer, Gosford.—The Expulsion of Mr. Christie.—An Imperial Commission of Inquiry.—Failure of Efforts at Conciliation.—The Arbitrament of Rebellion Evoked by Mackenzie and Papineau.... 213
--	---

CHAPTER XI.

OUT OF REBELLION INTO UNION.

Democ- d Deep of the —Non- tion of d As- adians ant of Lower Office Sover- g Cir- mbry- swell. Dema- Prov- Bitter —The 194	Nature of the Struggle in 1837.—The Rebel Leaders and American Democratic Ideals.—Defence of Sir F. Bond Head.—Weakness of Lord Gosford.—Mackenzie and his “Declaration.”—The Rising in Lower Canada.—Nelson, Chénier, Viger, and Morin.—At St. Denis and St. Charles.—Battle of St. Eustache.—Flight of Papineau.—Arrival of Lord Durham.—Proclamation of a Republic in Upper Canada.—Murder of Colonel Moodie.—Advance of the Rebels on Toronto.—Conflict near Montgomery’s Tavern.—Flight of Mackenzie to Navy Island.—Burning of the Caroline .—A Prolonged Border War.—Unfortunate Attitude of the United States.—American Sympathy with the Rebels.—Sir John Colborne Suppresses a Second Rising in the Lower Province.—Continued Raids from the United States.—Policy and Character of Lord Durham.—Summary of the Situation.—Loyalty of the Maritime Provinces.—Resolutions of the Legislatures and Despatch of Troops.—Sir John Harvey.—Trouble over the Maine Boundary Line.—Possibility of War with the United States.—Union of Upper and Lower Canada.... 243
--	--