SIR WILFRID ON THE H.B. ROUTE

New Outlet for Trade for the Benefit of the Whole Country—Will Still Spend Profusely.

MORDEN, Man., July 15.—(Special.)—Under a zinc roof, with the prairie sun scorching everything to a crisp, the thermometer hovering around 95, Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed a crowd of over 1200 to-day.

Despite the intense heat, which visibly affected Sir Wilfrid, he spoke with animation. Morden is situated in Lisgar County, 45 miles southwest of Winnipeg, near the international border, and comprises part of the belt which has been affected by the dry weather.

He said that he had been asked to discuss the controversy over the Manitoba boundaries, and declared that if Mr. Roblin had been so anxious to reach a disposition of that question he was to rush on the elections a few weeks ago.

CITIES TRY TO AVERT STRIKE

London and Stratford Councils Ask Government to Interfere in Railway Trouble.

LONDON, July 15.—(Special.)—As a result of a petition signed by over 400 London men employed by the Grand Trunk, the city council at a meeting this afternoon decided to ask the government to enquire into the strike situation. The minister of railways will be asked to have a conciliation board appointed.

STRAFORD, July 15.—The city council at a special meeting this evening authorized the sending of a telegram to the minister of labor, asking that an effort be made to bring about a settlement between the G. T. R. Co. and its trainmen, so as to avoid the threatened strike, which would probably mean the shutting down of the local shops, which employ in the neighborhood of 1000 men.

MONTREAL, July 15.—The strike vote of the Grand Trunk trainmen is not yet complete, but so far as it has gone it is stated to show a large majority in favor of a strike. As regards the position of the C. P. R. trainmen and their demands, it is announced that the men will not sign the agreement as it now stands, and have appended the case to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

3500 FEET IN AIR

AVIATOR LOST HIS PERCH

Johnston, in Wright Biplane, Encountered Gale Away Up in the Sky and Was Unseated for Several Seconds—De Lesseps Also Made a High Flight.

To-day will afford the last opportunity to witness aeroplanes in flight near this city probably for a year. Those who have not yet witnessed a flight should not fail to go out to Weston this afternoon. The program will show aeroplanes in speed, altitude and fancy competition. So that the children especially may not miss this entertaining as well as educational performance, the management will admit all under 15 years of age for 10 cents.

Two aeroplanes in the air at one time was the spectacular feature of last evening's exhibition at Weston. While Count de Lesseps, in his favorite "Scarabee," soared around like a huge eagle at a height of 3200 feet, Ralph Johnston, in a Wright biplane, took wing and before he returned to earth had attained a height of 2800 feet. He seemed rather pleased to get back safe to terra firma, for he had encountered a wind, which, blowing at 75 miles an hour, according to his own estimate, gave him an uncomfortable experience.

At his extreme altitude, his machine took a dip, which, to the spectators below, appeared to be only four or five feet, but which in reality was nearly 200 feet. It was that sudden dip that made Johnston decide to come down, for it lifted him right up in his seat for some seconds, and nearly threw him out.

Johnston said he encountered two distinct currents of air, blowing in opposite directions and divided by a space in which it was quite calm. It is said that Johnston's experience, when he was nearly thrown from his seat, is uncommon with aeroplanes. The only other who have had a similar experience in the Wright biplanes are Orville Wright and Brookings.

Yesterday's program was really the most successful of the whole aviation outcome was five successful flights, two by De Lesseps, two by Johnston and one by Frank Coffyn, who arrived in Toronto yesterday from Atlantic City, where he made some sensational aerial journeys. Coffyn, however, did not show very high, his intention being to give an exhibition more to the crowd than to the Wright machine. He and Johnston used the same machine and both men performed some marvelous feats in the way of dipping, turning and swooping. Sometimes they would drop to within three or four feet of the ground and then soar upward to a height of 80 or 100 feet.

Honors were really divided as to the interest taken by the three or four thousand spectators. While Johnston may have gone higher, it was generally remarked that the count's machine was really the prettier looking one in the air, its appearance and movement being more like that of a bird.

The first flight was made by Johnston at 8.40, and he remained in the air 12 minutes, during which time he traveled around the field at the rate of 80 miles an hour, reaching a height of 800 feet. He made a number of sensational dives thru the air.

At seven o'clock the count in his biplane No. 8, rose from the ground after a run of 25 yards. He remained up only nine minutes, flying around at a height of 200 feet. Frank Coffyn, who took wing at 7.15 only remained up about three minutes and did not go higher than 100 feet or so. At one time he almost skidded along the ground the whole length of the field.

As the airship passed between the spectators and the horizon it reminded one of Bryan's poem, "The Water-fowl," where he says: "Vainly the fowler's eye might mark thy distant flight To do the wrongs."

BAD POLICY FOR CITY

Former Commissioner of Industries Agrees That Manufacturers Have Some Grievance.

The city's growth industrially being hampered by a too strict insistence on the letter of the building by-laws by the inspectors of the architect's department?

The assertions made by J. S. McKinnon, the retiring president of the Toronto branch of the Manufacturers' Association, at the annual meeting on Thursday, are causing this question to be asked. It has been evident for a long time that many local business men consider the city to have adopted a narrow policy and that industries are so hampered and fettered that they yearn to fly to pastures new.

Must Give and Take. The World yesterday asked for the opinion of Joseph Thompson, former civic commissioner of industries. Mr. Thompson, having had several years' experience in dealing with manufacturers, is thinking of locating in Toronto, and had an opportunity to look at both sides of the question. His emphatic opinion is that a "give and take" policy is the proper one for the city to adopt in keeping present industries within the fold and coaxing others to join. "It's not the big things that bother a man; it's the little, annoying things" is his axiom.

There's no doubt that the building by-laws are strict here, but I think the architect can show that they are no more so than in large cities of the United States," he said. "There is this difference, though. Here the by-laws are enforced to the extreme limit, but in the other cities they are not. In other Ontario cities and towns, such as Hamilton and Welland, the building by-laws are nothing like as strict as they are here; in fact, some other cities have practically no laws regarding factory buildings. In many cases the manufacturers say they are called upon to do more in Toronto than the insurance companies require them to do as to construction."

Inspectors Need Judgment. "There are a lot of cases where I think better judgment could be used, as for example in making alterations to a building. It may be a two story building to which the owner wishes to add a storey and which has been originally built with such an addition in prospect. There is sometimes trouble in getting the permit. What is needed is that the inspectors show good judgment."

THE NEWSBOYS' HOME. Boys Intend to Hustle Out for Funds.

'Now that a building is under option for purchase, to become true home, the members of the Newsboys' Union will resume active campaigning for additional funds. There's $3200 in the treasury now. Accompanying some of the contributions were such comments as these: "A most deserving object." "Worthy of all praise and assistance." "Enclosed find $5. Wish I could make it $500. The purpose is highly commendable."
