There have been some rumors in Conservative press to the effect that it the people might be difficult for the government to might be difficult for the government to man the Canadian navy, small as it is to There is one thing to be said in favor be at the beginning. It has been said of the action taken by the city council that the inducements are not such as to appeal to young men. These statements do not appear to have any reasonable foundation. Word comes from Ottawa that the government is receiving many enquiries with regard to all branches of the service, and that there is every prospect that all the men required will be readily available. This seems to be quite natily available. This seems to be quite natily available. This seems to be quite natily available. The cruisers which are to come out this summer will have British officers and a skeleton crew, and the latter will be provided in the content of the meanting in regard to street paving, and that they have taken action. It is, that they have taken action. It is the opinion of the majority of the alderment that they have made the best bardian offered them in connection with this work. Time and the pavement itself will test the correctness of their judgment. In the meantime, it is satisfactory to know that the pavement is to be laid and that the pavement is to be laid and that the delays which occur in connection with the delays which occur in connection with the delays which occur in connection with the world is growing better. There seems to be an increasing determination to make the other fellow do what is right.

his visit to European capitals, and in the addresses he has delivered. Everywhere he has been received with honor, and everywhere he has been an object of popular, as well of official interest. This is a tribute to the character of a man who has a fearless habit of saying what he thinks and standing up fearlessly for his ideals. The people of the United States read with a great deal of interest what he had to say to the English people, but they await with a great deal more interest what he may say to themselves on his return home. Though an ex-president, Mr. Roosevelt is a potent influence, and at a time when there are insurgents in the Republican party, and some uncertainty as to the future policy of that party, and what the people may do to it in the next elections, there is a great deal of curiosity to know the attitude of Mr. Roosevelt. He was a superior of the structure of the savern.

The London cables strengthen the impression that Earl Grey will remain governor-general of Canada until next spring, and that he will then be succeeded by the Duke of Connaught. This course would be entirely satisfactory to the Canadian people, who would be extremely glad to welcome the King's uncle as the next occurant of Rideau Hall.
