derful men of Edinburgh. The dining room was darker than the captain expected to see it, but Roy explained, now the curtains and the dark walls shaded the room into gloom.

"And the dark-stained floor like it. Even the brasses are an ugly glare in it," said the captain. "I'd prefer all. I think it is a darker room than before, Roy. But, of course you don't sit in your dining room as I do."

"Come and see the drawing room. It is all on view today, by good luck. Things are to be covered up tonight. Now, what do you think of this?"

The captain entered the room he had known so well in Roy's time, and was really astonished at the change. "New every bit of it, except some old bits of furniture that were in the old lumber room. Lots of color here, no gloom, brightness. That's how I like it now, Captain!"

"It is very grand, certainly, but the colors are in perfect harmony of the old furniture. I don't like it, but I fear I am too old to ever taste home in it. I would, I think, be well kept with such surroundings. All the same, I admire your taste. All this newness is a beauty. Some day I will come over and stay a day."

"Maud chose that, or rather an artist cousin chose it for her," said Peterson. "Maud is very sweet, and winning and gentle, and cool, but she has not an eye for color at all, or I would have left this room for her to exert her skill and taste upon. As it was, I told one of the men from Edinburgh what I wished done. Mrs. Sutherland was consulted of course, she has all Amy's fine artistic nature and really, I must say they have done well. Yes, that blue vase is lovely."

"I am glad that you consulted Mrs. Sutherland," said the captain. "She is fond of pretty things, and it gives her pleasure to choose the furniture for you. She was always a wise and sensible girl, and has made her husband's home a happy one. I added, with a sigh, as he thought of how unhappy Roy was made by Amy, and of the happiness he seemed expected to get in his marriage with Maud Gemmel."

BORDEN AT BERLIN.

Conservative Leader Enters Hon. Mr. King's Riding.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—R. L. Borden happened into Berlin on the day of Hon. W. L. M. King's nomination and got a noisy reception. The leader's voice was in poor condition and he had some trouble raising it above the disturbance.

Mr. Borden admitted that in 1896 and for some years afterwards, Canada desired reciprocity with the United States; but that was the nineteenth century; this was the twentieth century, the century of Canada (Cheers).

In 1893, when the bill to provide for the National Transcontinental Railway was before the House, Sir Wilfrid Laurier had asserted that Canada could only prosper by being absolutely independent of the United States. Contrast that with the present situation. He likened the sentiment surrounding reciprocity to the spiritual comfort which a character in Scripture derived from repeating over to himself the word "Mesopotamia."

True, he went on, reciprocity would obtain with a country like the British West Indies, which did not grow what Canada had to export, and only exported what Canada could not produce.

The immediate cause for the reciprocity pact was that the Dominion Government got down on their knees before the United States, because they were afraid of the enormous dislocation of business if the United States imposed the maximum duty. I do not think they were right in doing that. I am free to admit that our Government had the support of the business interests of Canada, and it would have been better to have sought that support out then and there, and to determine whether or not we were free people in Canada so far as the control of our tariff is concerned, or whether we would submit to interference of that kind.

Johnston, Benefit Meet.
Chicago, Aug. 22.—A wind that reached 30 miles an hour at times prevented all but a few aviators from trying to get into the air at the benefit performance for the widow of St. Croix Johnston yesterday. It had been announced that all the rules of the International Aviation Meet would be declared null and void, and that the exhibition would be an spectacular one during the meet.

The wind proved too gusty and for several hours no one attempted to fly. Then Lincoln Benches arose, circled the field, descended and declared the wind was too strong for safe flying. An hour later Beachey, Gill, C. F. Rogers and James Ward gave short exhibition flights.

Got Up and Hanged Himself.
Smith's Falls, Ont., Aug. 22.—Harvey Wilton, aged 23, an employee of the Frost & Wood Co., was found dead in his room, having hanged himself by means of an elaborate arrangement of straps.

He was sitting on the verandah of his boarding-house in conversation with a friend, when he arose suddenly and went to his room. Some hours later he was called, but gave no response. The chief of police was summoned and, breaking into his room, found the body.

There is said to have been a woman in the case.

Togo Interested in Hydro.
Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 22.—Admiral Togo left here aboard the private car "Canada" last night, after spending two days within hearing of the mighty cataract. He said before leaving that he was much impressed with the beauty of the falls and the wonderful power development.

He was much interested in the Hydro Electric scheme. He left Toronto for the west on the Canadian Pacific transcontinental express at 10:30 last night. He spent the entire day with Japanese Consul-General to Canada Nakamura, who accompanied him to Toronto.

The Lincoln Sunday School Question service which we use is unique, it is high class, it is found fault with by none, it is admired by thousands and has the endorsement of all thoughtful people. We call the attention of everyone of our readers to these questions.

LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY OF THE LIBERALS OF INGERSOLL

Committee Rooms Crowded to the Doors
Last Evening and Argumentative
Addresses by Drs. Rogers and MacKay.

WHAT RECIPROCITY PACT MEANS
Clear and Concise Elucidation of the Agreement—Its Affect Upon Manufactured Goods.

There was inspiration for even the oldest Liberal in the enthusiasm that pervaded the committee rooms at a representative rally last night. The rooms were crowded to capacity, seating accommodation being at a premium. The one big subject of the campaign—reciprocity—monopolized attention, with speakers of a particularly fighting character delivered by Dr. Rogers and Dr. MacKay. Both of these speakers dwelt upon the benefits that would accrue to the masses from reciprocal trade relations with the United States as proposed, and spoke optimistically of the outcome when ballots are marked on September 21st.

Enthusiasm and unity, such as characterized the meeting certainly bespoke a verdict for "Laurier and Larger Markets."

The support which reciprocity will receive by the people of Ingersoll, taking last night's rally as a criterion, will be decidedly strong, and the earnest spirit here is typical of that throughout the South Riding.

In addition to the splendid addresses last night's program also embraced instrumental selections by Mr. W. K. Watterworth and songs by Mr. M. Morrison, which were rendered in his usual pleasing manner.

Dr. Rogers, the initial speaker, devoted his time largely to an elucidation of the proposed reciprocity pact showing conclusively in his well-taken arguments, that it did not mean absolute free trade generally, but in natural products only, while in manufactured goods it meant a reduction of the tariff. He discussed the question largely from a business point of view pointing out that never in his experience had he heard so little about reciprocity in an election campaign. The proposed reciprocity pact, he declared, was very simple in its general outline, and it would not interfere with many products of both Canada and the United States. He made it plain in the course of his arguments, that the manufacturers had no reason to fear disaster from the working of the agreement as the duty on manufactured articles had been reduced in only a few cases and that only from two and a half per cent to five per cent. This, surely was not absolute free trade as some people had erroneously stated. He pointed out that in schedule "B" of the agreement Canada had reduced the duty to some extent on a number of articles, and that the United States had made reductions to a very great extent, which would be of material benefit to Canada.

With one exception, he said, products manufactured in Ingersoll would not be affected by the treaty, and this one would be to the extent of only from two and a half to five per cent. The bolt works would not be affected at all. The agreement, he said, would work out advantageously to both countries, and Canada would receive the greatest benefit as she would have access to a market of 92,000,000 people.

The speaker also alluded to some objections to the pact, but added that in most cases pockets were being touched. He advocated a broad view of the matter with the idea of supporting that which calculated to give the greatest benefit to the greatest number. The cost of living, the speaker declared, would never be increased by a reduction of the tariff. The revenue of the country, it was pointed out was over $3,000,000 greater than was required. This, the government had decided to throw off. It was absurd to suppose that all our products would go to the American market. He asked if all our Canadian products went to the United States and the products of the United States would "flood Canada" as had been argued by those opposed to reciprocity, how could the cost of living be increased? Annexation, the speaker said, was simply the talk of men who did not know what else to talk about. It was only necessary, he said, to refer to Canadian history to ascertain the benefits of reciprocal trade relations with the United States. This, he showed, had been the policy of Conservative leaders for over half a century. During the period of half a century Canada did have reciprocal trade with the United States she had flourished and with that spirit had advocated annexation, which spirit had emanated from Conservatives at Montreal, and quickly perished. "I saw an old man the other day, said the speaker, 'and he said 'You cannot get me to vote against reciprocity. When we had it before those were the best days I ever saw.' The speaker told of the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty by the United States and of the forming of Confederation in Canada in 1867.

Patriotism, the speaker said, was not all in the Conservative party. If there was any lack of patriotism in the Liberal party, it was not in the Liberal party who stood the Liberal party Toronto. People, he said, would be more loyal if they did the very best thing for themselves.

MAYOR DR. MAC KAY.
The stirring, convincing speech, by Mayor Dr. MacKay showed that he was in fine campaign form. He was very pleased at the attendance which indicated that "Liberalism is alive in the town of Ingersoll." The speaker related how Conservative leaders in the past had advocated reciprocity such as was being discussed at the present time. Some Ingersoll manufacturers, the speaker said, were impressed upon the minds of their workmen that it reciprocity was carried out it would be necessary for them to shut up their factories. He would like to vote for anything that would hurt the implement manufacturing in Ingersoll. But a Conservative member had introduced a resolution in the House that there be absolute free trade with the United States regarding agricultural implements, and all Conservative members had voted for the resolution. "If it is going to close up a factory by a reduction of five per cent, in the duty, what about free trade entirely?"

The speaker also discussed many phases of the packing industry. He was of the opinion that reciprocity would not injuriously affect the packing industry in Ingersoll. He believed there was a first-class merger and Canada. He claimed that Mr. Flavelle, a wealthy packer, opposed to reciprocity, had made his money out of the Toronto News and the Globe to edit the early editor of the Globe. The speaker went on to show the great profits of the packing industry, mentioning that the profits of the Davis Packing Company were 120 per cent. The speaker also stated that Mr. Thomas Seldin, who had purchased the statement that a country, a product of the Ingersoll Packing Company, and after it had travelled three thousand miles to the British retail store, and three thousand miles back to Ingersoll, he laid it down in his own home cheaper than he could buy it here. It also was possible, he said, to buy Ingersoll here it having been retailed there at 15 cents a pound when it was sold ling at over twenty cents a pound in Ingersoll. Opponents to reciprocity say "how can you help the farmer and the workingman at the same time?" Is this not a little of it?"

The speaker said that the Conservatives had some difficulty in getting a candidate in the South Riding, but that they had a "perpetual candidate." In bringing out Mr. Donald Sutherland the party had infringed upon the rights and privileges of the Ontario Government. Mr. Sutherland was an employee of the Government at a salary of $2,300 per year and said the speaker, "I suppose his salary stopped like clock-work the minute he received the nomination."

The Doctor also pointed out that Donald was a Scotchman, and a little canty and that he no doubt made it a point to ascertain if he would get his old job back or something better in case he was defeated.

MR. STEPHEN NOXON.
Mr. Stephen Noxon, who has just returned from a European trip, during which he witnessed the Coronation procession, gave a very interesting address. He mentioned that England was the greatest Free Trade country of the world, and that while there he had conversed with many business radical change. The speaker did not believe the manufacturers of this country were justified in making the allusion to the coronation of King George V, saying it was difficult for a stranger to understand them. Many factors, he said, entered into it and he went on to state that he saw a procession of suffragettes, five abreast, which reached five miles.

MR. M. J. COMEY, President of the Ingersoll Association, presided.

Hon. Clifford Sifton will address the electors of South Oxford, in the rink this Evening on the public issues of the day. Seats reserved for ladies and their escorts.
