Mr. Pinnock, who is accompanied by his wife and two sons, has been stationed in Southern Nigeria for nearly a quarter of a century. About two years ago he was obliged to leave the native town of Oso on account of his outspoken condemnation of the acts of cruelty and oppression of the native king, which were condoned at by the British officials in the protectorate.

FOUND A COLORED GIRL IN HIS BED

Embarrassing Predicament in which Sophie Oliver, who is demoted, Placed City Livery Man.

Late Friday night the proprietor of a livery stable, after placing his coach horses in their stalls, was given a great surprise when he returned to his front office. In the office he has a bed where he or one of his employees sleep during the night so as to be handy in case of a call. When he entered the office he was greatly surprised to find a bundle of woman's clothing piled upon a chair and in his bed reposing comfortably was a colored woman named Sophie Oliver. The woman had disrobed and, when asked what she was doing there, said she was tired and finding the door open and a bed in the place, thought she would just turn in and have a sleep. The stableman told her to get up, dress herself, and get out of the building. The woman refused to leave, so a hurly call was sent out for the police.

Policeman Rankine responded and the woman refused to get out of bed and dress herself for the officer and for a few minutes he was in a queer daze what to do. Finally he called on the patrol wagon and with nothing on but her scanty attire, Sophie was bundled into the hurly-up wagon and her clothing was also taken along and she was conveyed to a central police station cell where she was finally induced to put her clothes on.

Saturday morning she was taken before the police magistrate who asked her what she meant by her actions and in reply she said that she had had an awful dream. It was plainly seen that the woman was mentally unbalanced and she was remanded. She was examined by Dr. Thomas Walker on Saturday afternoon and he issued a certificate for her removal to the hospital for nervous diseases, where she was conveyed by Detective Killen.

DISPUTE BETWEEN FISHERY INSPECTOR BELYEA AND ALDERMAN A. O. H. WILSON OVER ALLEGED SUICIDE FISHING.

Ald. A. O. H. Wilson, who is in the fish business, and ex-Ald. J. Fred Belyea, the Dominion fishery inspector, have been at war for some time. Only a week or so ago Mr. Wilson and Inspector Belyea had rather a lively time in the police court when Mr. Wilson claimed that the inspector was not doing his duty and did not report his brother, Harry Belyea, for having the entrance to his weir open, on Navy Island, on Sunday.

Yesterday, when Inspector Belyea was making his rounds about the harbor, he says that every weir in the harbor was closed but the weir owned by Ald. Wilson, on the Strait Shore fishing grounds, Inspector Belyea said last night he intended to take a police officer with him and would confiscate the fish in the Wilson weir also two of Ald. Wilson's fishing boats. The case will probably be given a hearing in the police court and promises to be an interesting one.

Ald. A. O. H. Wilson telephoned to The Standard last evening and said that he had had a telephone message from Inspector Belyea, who informed him that he intended to confiscate Wilson's fish and boats on a charge of fishing his weir on Sunday. Mr. Wilson reported that he had said to the inspector: "Why don't you use me as you did your brother, Harry, and report me?"

He also claims that Inspector Belyea visited the weir last evening, and that in the course of argument, the inspector invited him to take his boat off and fight. The inspector was accompanied by a police officer, but Mr. Wilson says the fish were not confiscated.

The matter will be settled in the courts.

POLICE CLEANED OUT SHEFFIELD ST. DIVE

Two Women and a Man Spent Sunday in Central Station Cell as Result of Police Visit.

Another house on Sheffield street with a bad reputation kept by a colored woman named Mrs. Sarah Morris, was cleaned out Saturday night and the proprietress with two inmates and a man were arrested.

William Brennan visited the house on Saturday night and after remaining there for some time had an altercation with one of the women over some money. To get satisfaction he left the house and told his story to Acting Sergeant Ross and Patrolman Henry. Brennan got more satisfaction than he thought was coming to him, for he was taken into custody by the officers and was locked up in a central station cell and detained as a witness, while the officers made a raid on the joint. The Morris woman is charged with being the keeper of a bawdy house and Kathleen McIntyre, Gettie Ebbett and Fred Martin were also arrested and charged with being inmates. Ellen Jefferson, aged five years, and who is said to be an adopted daughter of the Morris woman was also taken care of by the police, and is being detained at the central police station for protection.

SARDINIAN'S PASSENGERS SAW RECKAGE AND BODIES FROM TITANIC DISASTER

Also Aided Mackay-Bennett to Care for Bodies Found - Icebergs Marked Spot where Giant Liner Went Down - Vessel's Steward Committed Suicide During Passage Over.

The Allan liner Sardinian, Captain R. McKillop, arrived in port yesterday morning from London and Havre, and docked at the Long Wharf. On the voyage across the western ocean, the steamer encountered the worst of weather, and landed her 31 second and 166 average passengers in good health.

On the day after the steamer left Havre an unpleasant incident occurred when one of the stewards, Bennett by name, was reported missing. When the officer in charge was informed of the affair, he at once instituted a thorough search, but without avail, and it is thought that the man committed suicide by jumping overboard. What caused the unfortunate man to do away with himself is not known, as up to the time of his disappearance he seemed to be in the best of health and spirits. The sad ending of this unhappy man cast a gloom over the ship, a gloom that was further deepened by news received by wireless of the Titanic disaster.

As the Sardinian sailed before the Titanic accident and was out of the zone of the other steamers, those on board did not know of the terrible disaster until some days afterward, when wireless messages were received. As these messages were very meagre they did not get the full story until last Tuesday evening, when the death-ship, MacKay-Bennett, was spoken.

On Tuesday last the Sardinian received a wireless message from MacKay-Bennett, asking if the Allan liner had any spare canvas on board.

On receiving a reply in the affirmative, the death-ship gave her latitude and longitude with the result that the Sardinian came alongside at four minutes past seven on Tuesday evening, and transferred several rolls of canvas which will be used to cover the dead bodies as they are discovered. The Allan liner got under way again at 8.30.

While alongside the MacKay-Bennett those on board the Sardinian saw many gruesome sights, which firmly impressed on their minds the fearful results of the disaster. The MacKay-Bennett reported the finding of Astor, Brown, Butler, C. M. Tillys, and several others of note, 206 having been found altogether.

When the steamer was leaving the funeral ship, those on deck were horrified to see the body of a once beautiful woman floating on the waves. To add to the horror of the situation, the woman's hair became loose and floated in long, tangled masses around her head and shoulders. The body was gowned in a low decked dress which the woman had undoubtedly worn to her evening meal, the last meal she was to eat on this earth. The body of this heroine of the disaster was afterwards picked up by the MacKay-Bennett.

When the Allan liner passed the place where the Titanic went to her watery grave, large masses of wreckage were seen floating about while as if to guard the fatal spot from impious hands, two great icebergs made a white and ghostly tombstone to the dead.
