The woman appears to be of weak intellect.

Montreal, Jan. 15.—(Special)—The retirement of Mr. Shaughnessy from the C. P. R. may be one of the outcomes of the war between that road and the Crow's Nesters and The Globe newspaper of Toronto. Mr. Shaughnessy has either to beat them out or go under. One of his friends, however, said tonight that he had a couple of shots yet in his gun. The coming session of parliament will see a perfect circus over this affair and Sir Wilfrid Laurier is already talking of cancelling his trip to Australia.

There are five civil cases entered for trial. The case of Bourque vs. Fitzgerald, an action against a doctor for malpractice, is now before the court.

PORTLAND'S NEW BISHOP. Vicar General O'Brien Has Been Appointed.

Portland, Me., Jan. 16.—The selection of Vicar General O'Brien as bishop of Portland, in succession to the lamented Bishop Haley, comes as a pleasant surprise to Catholics here as it had been generally understood that O'Brien some time ago declined to be a candidate, when requested by fellow-clergy.

The new bishop is held in high universal esteem in Portland. Vicar General O'Brien, who is in the 77th year of his age, is a man of high character and of the highest attainments in his profession. He is a native of Ireland, and has been in the priesthood 35 years. He is regarded as by all means the best equipped man among the Maine clergy for the office of bishop. Nothing concerning the date of his consecration or other details can be learned, owing to his absence from the city.

THE GORHAM MURDER.

In Looking for McLain, the Wrong Man Was Tracked.

Rollinsford, N. H., Jan. 15.—The man seen in Rollinsford yesterday and who was suspected of having been connected with the Gorham murder case, was today traced to West Kennebunk, Me., where he is employed by William Webber. His name is Joseph A. Russell. He received his present name when he was in the employ of the late John Gorham. Mr. Russell says he went to Portland Saturday, where he went to a house for the night. He returned to Gorham Sunday morning, where he was he and he was obliged to get out, leaving his trunks in his room. He is unable to say how he reached Rollinsford, some 20 miles distant, but remembers calling at a house Sunday morning where a pair of overalls was furnished him. He then went from Rollinsford to the farm of the late John Gorham, where he was employed. He claims he was robbed some time during his absence from the farm. Mr. Russell bears no resemblance to the description of John McLain, who is suspected of having been the murderer of Bill Hays in the Gorham case.

The fourth day after the tragedy at Gorham began with no more known than the whereabouts of McLain than when the hunt for the missing white confederate of the negro under arrest began. All reported clues have been followed with unvarying disappointment.

BURNED AT THE STAKE.

Work of a Lawless Frenchie Western Mob.

NEGRO'S AWFUL DEATH.

The Mob Broke Into the Jail Where He Was Confined and Carried Him To Scene of His Crime—Details Of the Horror.

Leavenworth, Kan., Jan. 15.—Fred Alexander, the negro who on Saturday evening attempted to assault Miss Eva Roth and who was supposed to have assaulted and killed Pearl Forbes in the city in November last, was taken from the sheriff's guard by a mob today and burned at the stake at the scene of his crimes, half a dozen blocks from the centre of the city. Probably 8,000 people witnessed the lynching.

The negro was taken from his cell at the state penitentiary this afternoon and brought to town. Fifty deputy marshals surrounded him and deputy sheriffs sat in the back of either side of him. Fifty vehicles followed the mob. The trip to town was made quietly.

When the corner of Fourth and Olive streets was reached the police who were in the back following the mob, the mob and Alexander was concealed jumped out and chased several negroes.

This created a diversion which attracted the attention of everyone and during the chase the doors of the cell where the man was locked in a cell just as the mob reached the doors. All the doors of the jail were then locked. Sheriff Everhardt, on demand, refused to deliver the negro. The side door was forced from its hinges and the crowd poured in. A huge iron bar was secured and the iron door of the cell room forced far enough for the men to climb over. Several minutes were spent in this manner until the crowd had gained entrance to the stockade and there was a yelling pack in the jail yard.

The doors of the cell room were then broken down. A man with sharp eyes espied a shapeless mass crouching down in one corner of the dark cell and a yell of terror issued from the cell. The tension at this time was so great that strong men filled the corridors with hysterical laughter. Outside the crowd was yelling itself hoarse.

The negro was dragged into the open. He had been struck over the head with a hammer but still conscious. Men fought to get at him and infuriated, struck savagely at him, hitting only his captors, who guarded him well.

"Don't hurt him now," they cried. "Let us take him to the hill into the court house yard where they dragged him and there they stopped.

In reply to demands for a confession the man said: "I am innocent. I am dying for what another man did. I see lots of my friends. They know I did not do it. If I had been guilty I would have said so at the penitentiary and would have staid there for life. The warden told me so. The policemen told me so. Would not I have told them if I was guilty?"

At this one young fellow struck Alexander in the forehead with his fist three times.

Alexander had spoken with the resignation of a man who sees before him only death. When he had finished talking a man who had been in the crowd stepped from a corner of the court house yard. The negro was backed up against it and while a chain was sought Alexander was given another chance to confess.

"I have told you that I am innocent. I cannot tell you any more. I did not do it."

The suggestion to take the man to the place of the murder met with instant approval and the crowd, carrying the negro, pushed on towards Fourth street. He was thrown into a wagon which was started for the vicinity of Lawrence avenue and Spruce streets, followed by the crowd.

A railroad engine was also destroyed. The result in $6,200 loss to Mr. R. C. Tait over and above insurance. Mr. Tait had 2000 bushels of potatoes stored in one of his warehouses on which there was only $400 insurance. On the hall and warehouse buildings there was $2,000 and on the house and carriage stock there was $800. The fire originated in the carriage shop, where men have been at work during the winter. Burns belonging to E. J. Smith and William Jackson were also destroyed, but the loss is not heavy. The fire had gained such headway when discovered that it was impossible for the men to cope with it, but had to let it alone.

Annual Meeting Last Evening—Election and Address of President.

There is Some Grippe in St. John This Winter,

BUT NO EPIDEMIC.

This City is Fairly Free While New York and Other Places Suffer from the Disease of Grippe—Some Pneumonia and Bronchitis Cases.

The grippe is now almost as epidemic in American cities as it was several years ago. Recently it was stated that in New York alone there were over 120,000 cases, while Chicago, Toronto and other cities have a proportionately large number. In view of these conditions a Telegram representative called on some of the leading physicians of the city and obtained an interview with them on the state of health here, which is found to be very satisfactory.

"That grippe is an infectious disease is highly probable, although difficult to prove. There seems no doubt that the so-called common bacillus is the cause of the disease. However, it is an ill wind that blows nobody good" and while it might not be quite correct to say that the medical men rejoice in ill winds certain it is that many of them are reaping a rich harvest as a result of the changeable weather of the past month or two.

Many of the doctors are kept busy night and day. While the majority of them say that there is nothing serious in the way of disease or sickness, there is plenty to keep them on their feet all the time. There is a prevalent idea that influenza is becoming epidemic here but several prominent physicians seen yesterday said that it was nothing more than the severe cold usual at this season, at least in the majority of cases.

Dr. E. B. Berryman said in discussing the matter: "Severe colds are usual at this time of year, but the present one seems to have assumed more the character of grippe and pneumonia. Personally, I have in the past few weeks seen more cases of pneumonia than for some years. Otherwise I think the winter a particularly healthy one. There are many cases of grippe and I regard it as contagious. Its symptoms are unmistakable. It comes with a general miserable feeling, irritation of the lungs and rise of temperature. The patient does not recuperate as quickly as from influenza."

Dr. Walker said he could hardly dignify the prevailing cold with the name of grippe. It was more of the ordinary kind and he was from a way in which it ran through whole families he would be inclined to think it contagious. There seems to be more bronchitis than pneumonia among his patients. He thought the present winter particularly free from sickness. Judging from his personal experience, though he had greatly rushed, Dr. Walker said there was no usual amount of sickness among children but so far nothing of an alarming nature had developed.

Dr. Emery found a strong tendency to bronchitis and pneumonia this winter but less of the latter than the former. The form of grippe he encountered was fairly severe and probably contagious. Not all the colds which affected people were grippe, but there was much more of it this year than last. It is more severe than influenza, inasmuch as other complications usually follow.

Other physicians were seen and expressed the opinion that the grippe was only prevailing form of sickness. In discussing the smallpox scare one doctor remarked that it was a particularly mild type indeed as he had not heard of a fatal termination of a single case.

Two or three druggists said that in the past three weeks they had filled more prescriptions for severe colds, grippe and bronchitis than for years in the same time.

A GHASTLY FIND.

Body of a Man Found in a Trunk.

Court La Tour, I. O. O. F.

New York, Jan. 16.—The body of a man, with his throat cut and showing other marks of violence, was found in a trunk at the bulkhead of pier 11, East River, just before noon today. It was identified two hours later by a woman as the body of Michael Weissburger, an east side Hebrew, employed to set jewelry on the installment plan. The name of the woman who identified the body, and the address at which the victim of the murder had resided, the detectives refused to disclose.

Three of the victim's front teeth had been knocked out.

Captain Titus, speaking of the case, said: "I believe that the crime was committed in a house—probably a tenement—and that the murderers knew that Weissburger carried jewelry about him. He had $200 worth of jewelry with him at the time, which he carried in bags. He was a married man and had a large family."

"Captain Titus said that the woman who identified the body was not the victim's wife, but was one of his customers. Detectives are at work now on every end of the case.
