John you were kind enough to give a little Testament. Little did either us think that that little book would day save my life, but such is the e. Last Tuesday night we were en-red on an intricate job—I am not owed to tell you the nature of the n-the enemy had been busy with his guns, but as his range was rather is our heads. I was guite pleased to all those big shells going to waste, in it, I was shaking hands with myself, try little bit of pleasure did not to long, for a moment I thought I was the air service and was taking my sit fight. They opened my coat and it, but with the exception of an ugly, bing bruise and a little stiffness I was ind out what had struck me, but uid find nothing. Taking out my hote ok about half an hour later I found e little thing that had caused the com-tion, a soft nosed bullet; it had struck is uite book first and lodged itself in y note book. I am sending you both oks, you will see for yourself what a see call I had. I want you to give is the my note book, if you please, ow they are talking of sending me to guand for a short rest. Hoping you are all well and hoping hear from you very soon, I an, dear the are for yourself. Mark The set Poise.

Some Guides to Poise. e polite, but not obsequious, not rl-ulously affected. nomical, but not sti nurious. Be brave, but not foolhardy. Be loving, but not soft. Be clean, but not fastidious. Be self-respecting, but not vain. Be gentle, but not effeminate. Be thoughtful of others, but not office us. Be enthusiastic, but not gushing. The motto of Solon, the wise, was feden agan"—"Nothing in excess." Some witty Frenchman said, "Ous tes are our virtues carried to excess." In the Apostle Paul's list of virtues, prinning with faith, the last is tem-rance; which did not mean in his lan-inge abstention from alcohol, but self-ntrol. So the crown of a good man is his ntrol. So the crown of a good man is his wer to limit his every force. He is hove his pleasures, before his failures, hind his ideals, apart from his sins id unconscious of his goodness. Perfection is not for mortals. But we n have poise, its human equivalent. r. Frank Crane, in Woman's World.

Seaforth, Ont., July 27-German sym-thizers are blamed for what is consid-ed a deliberate attempt to burn a ware-buse of the Ogilvie Milling Company, intaining 20,000 bushels of wheat, here noon today. The fire was discovered by workmen, ho, on investigation, found oily waste creted under the building. There was the damage.
