The French Press expresses great surprise and disappointment with the results of the Chartist attempt.

The London Times, reviewing these utterances of Editorial spleen, says :--

The National faintly alludes to a rule which it does not observe, but without which it cannot expect to solve the mystery of a nation so different from its own. "The Chartist Association," it says, "for reasons which a foreigner has neither the means nor the right to judge, yielded before a display of force and an imminent violent struggle." A "foreigner," however, suffering struggle." A "foreigner," however, suffering this confessed incapacity of judgment, ought not to have assumed at once that the submission was to military force. We are under no temptation to underrate the danger of that day; but we beg to assure the National, that the two real parties then enrolled and arrayed against one another were ten thousand Chartists and two hundred thousand citizens. We are not pretending that government committed the romantic folly of having two political parties to break one another's heads in the streets. It is very true that the known presence of soldiers and treble ranks of Police averted the horrors of an useless collision. But there was a moral victory wrought that day which the National seems glad to forget. The result which tells on the heart of the country, which reassures every peaceful citizen and renders "Chartism" ridiculous, is the fact of two hundred thousand peaceful men in the metropolis alone, besides a proportionate number in our great manufacturing towns, having turned out with great inconvenience and some little risk, to maintain the institutions of their country against an insulting threat of revolutionary violenceagainst an insolent and outrageous minority, who had not even fought their own battle on its own grounds but had gone about to seek a treacherous alliance with a disaffected province on the forward to protest against legislative reform. Not one of them holds himself committed against any one of "the six points of the Charter." But there is no disguising the matter-revolution walked our streets. A gang of desperadoes, knowing how easily, how dexterously, or how easually, the trick or accident had been done abroad, were minded to try their luck and to fish for a revolution in the streets of London. They found the waters all guarded. They found not merely the police and the army, but the whole population against them. In that was their disappointment and doom. It is this which takes the event out of the category of dynastic or aristocratic obstinacies in which the National hastens to swamp it. Had the people stood aloof, or still more, had those two hundred thousand hailed the Chartist demonstration, it is very possible that both the police and the army might failed of their duty, and the day have been lost. Happily there is no political opinion affirmed or denied in this event. We have only vindicated the free action of the Legislative, which was quite ready last night to make the Chartist pe-tition the subject of a ten day's debate, had not Mr. Fergus O'Connor found John street a more convenient or more congenial sphere for his elo-quence than St. Stephen's. We shall have no trade was usually brisk, and activity was obser-"Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite." revolution but the same as that we have had year by year for centuries-the same as that which has effected a greater social improvement in this in a few days full of West India produce. But country than either the revolution of 1798 or that of 1830. We shall go on probably, extendng and purifying the constituency. We shall make more laws than ever for the people, for the emancipation of industry and the protection of the poor. We shall fill the gulf that yawns between poverty and wealth. We shall give to Ireland the benefit of England's resources and her own. Doubtless the vivid march of revolution abroad will quicken our own pase at home; will shortly be neutralized in our soil. But we relief, or whether they will take upon themselves shall still move naturally, equably, and surely—the responsibility of thwarting what appears to out an effort being made to heal their maladiesand thousands of famishing wretches are sinking into the arms of death from absolute starvation." Mr. Bates, a Baptist missionary, who visits the United States with the hopes of collecting funds, and speaking of the past, remarks :-Never had any civilized people experienced such sufferings before, and never before was there been a desperate struggle on the part of the o much benevolence manifested to afford any ople . lief. England contributed largely oney was sent from France, Germany and Italy The Sultan of Turkey, the people of India, and the free Negroes of the West, all sent us relief. The citizens of the United States raised subscripns on a gigantic scale-subscriptions worthy of a great and benev lent people, and calculated o coment a union between two nations of kindred stitutions and similar origin. Indeed all nations ard our cry, and all nations came to our aid. The crisis is over. We do not think any more vill die of starvation, but our difficulties are only beginning to be felt. The future seems dark and certain

ITALY.

The Austrian troops are returning rapidly from Lombardy, blowing up the bridges as they go. The Provisional Government of Venice has ent a note to the government of Milan, in which it declares that Venice intends to unite herself to the State of Lombardy, accepting in advance the form of government, either monarchical or re-publican, which the latter might think right to adopt.

The French Minister of Foreign Affairs had reeived by telegraph, from the French consul at Leghorn, a despatch announcing that all Dal-matia, the Frioul, and the Tyrol (Italian), had given their adhesion to the Venetian republic. The following are the bases of a new treaty said to have been concluded between the Pope, the King of Sardina, and the Grand Duke of one hand, and a foreign republic on the other. Those two hundred thousand men did not come Tuscany, for the future organization of Italy. The Italian Peninsula to be divided into six great states, 1. Naples. 2. Sicily. 3. States of the Church. 4. The kingdom of Etruria, for the advantage of "the Grand Duke of Tuscany, to consist of the actual Grand Duchy, and the adjoining territories of Pontremoli, Modena, Pietrasante, and Lunigiana. 5. Lombardy, under whatever form of Government the Lombards may adopt. 6. Sardina, with an indemnity to King Charles Albert in case Savoy should be annexed to France. An alliance offensive and defensive between the six states. An Italian confederation well defended by a line of fortresses long the frontiers. A uniform law for weights, measures, and currency. Abolition of internal customs duties. A Diet at Rome under the presidency of the Pope.

The Jesuits have been expelled from Rome.

WEST INDIES.

The West Indian of the 13th, speaking of the affairs of the colony, says :--

"Five months have passed over since the pres sure on these colonics commenced, and every successive day brings with it an augmentation rather than a diminution of gloom. We are now vable on every hand-when ships were arriving with full cargoes to our merchants, and leaving what is the fact now? The imports are com-paratively trifling-merchants are ordering and receiving no supplies; trade is stagnant; pur-chases are confined to the bare necessaries of ife; the best bills cannot be sold except at an immense sacrifice—debts are unpaid. It is bad enough now. We are unwilling to anticipate the condition of things when the crop is reaped and shipped. We ask those who may be opposed to the scheme for the issue of Treasury notes whethand whatever actual benefits are there attained er they are prepared with any better scheme of delphia. As soon as their flight was known, steamer was employed to pursue them, having on board a large number of armed men, with a six pounder. They overtook the vessel at the mouth of the Potomac, while she lay at anchor, and all hands on board asleep. Had the arrival of the steamer been apprehended, as both parties were armed, it is probable there would have slaves to obtain their liberty. The captain and crew have been brought up to this city, and committed to prison with the slaves. The law of this district subjects the captain, if city, and committed to prison with the slaves. The law of this district subjects the captain, if not the crew, to imprisonment for ten years. Report says that the vessel was chartered in Philadelphia for the purpose, and that a brig was expected to meet the schoener, and take the slaves on board.
