

	Page
CHAP. VIII.—The same proved, from the authority of our historical Scriptures	66
CHAP. IX.—Of the authenticity of the historical Scriptures, in eleven Sections	79
SECT. I.—Quotations of the historical Scriptures by ancient Christian writers	86
SECT. II.—Of the peculiar respect with which they were quoted	100
SECT. III.—The Scriptures were in very early times collected into a distinct volume	113
SECT. IV.—And distinguished by appropriate names and titles of respect	117
SECT. V.—Were publicly read and expounded in the religious assemblies of the early Christians	119
SECT. VI.—Commentaries, &c., were anciently written upon the Scriptures	121
SECT. VII.—They were received by ancient Christians of different sects and persuasions	126
SECT. VIII.—The four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, thirteen Epistles of Saint Paul, the First Epistle of John, and the First of Peter, were received without doubt by those who doubted concerning the other books of our present canon	133
SECT. IX.—Our present Gospels were considered by the adversaries of Christianity, as containing the accounts upon which the religion was founded	137
SECT. X.—Formal catalogues of authentic Scriptures were published, in all which our present Gospels were included	143
SECT. XI.—The above propositions cannot be predicated of those books which are commonly called apocryphal books of the New Testament	145
CHAP. X.—Recapitulation	150

PROPOSITION II.

CHAP. I.—That there is NOT satisfactory evidence, that persons pretending to be original witnesses of any other similar miracles, have acted in the same manner, in attestation of the accounts which they delivered, and solely in consequence of their belief of the truth of those accounts	154
CHAP. II.—Consideration of some specific instances	173

PART. II.

THE AUXILIARY EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY.

CHAP. I.—Prophecy	181
CHAP. II.—The morality of the Gospel	191
CHAP. III.—The candour of the writers of the New Testament	221