The Story of the Earth and Man.—By J. W. Dawson, F. R. S., Principal and Vice-Chancellor of the McGill University, Montreal. (Holder and Stoughton).—Geology as a science must always prove attractive; its study serves the discipline the mind. The several chapters of this treatise were originally prepared and reproduced, with their illustrative diagrams, they make an exceedingly useful volume—a volume containing an epitome of all the theories from time to time advanced, and the modern arguments peculiar to this many-sided and important while he avoids such technicalities as are likely to confuse the unscientific reader, he leaves nothing untouched which is necessary to a fair—not to say complete—comprehension of the whole science. With commendable reticence, Dr. Dawson has left undiscussed the relation of scientific geology to the Mosaic account of the creation of the world; but on this branch of the subject he has previously written in his "Archæa," and, therefore, the less need to go over the ground a second time. All, however, will agree with him, that geology, to be really useful, must be emancipated from the control of bald metaphysical speculation, and delivered from that materialistic infidelity which, by robbing Nature of her spiritual element, makes science dry, barren, and repulsive, diminishes its educational value, and even renders it less efficient for purposes of practical research.
