QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

BONE SPAVIN.

Would it be safe to blister a pregnant mare for bone spavin? Would you recommend Fleming's Spavin Paste?

F. R. S.

Ans.—It is quite safe to blister a pregnant mare. I have had no experience with Fleming's Spavin Paste. I would recommend the standard blister, composed of 2 drams each, biniodide of mercury and cantharides, mixed with 2 ozs. vaseline, applied in the ordinary way so often described in these columns.

DISEASED NAVEL.

The navel of my two-year-old colt is raw, and projects about the size of a butternut.

L. F. S.

Ans.—If there is a rupture, you must employ a veterinarian to treat. If no rupture exists, dress with butter of antimony, applied with a feather, once daily for three days. Then dress three times daily in a five-per-cent. solution of carbolic acid until healed. If there be a rupture, you will be able to force the intestine up through the opening with your hand, but it will return when pressure is removed.

LAMINITIS.

Pregnant mare stood idle in the stable for a long time, then was worked for two days, after which she became very sore in front, especially when backing, when she keeps her knees stiff and drags her feet; after a few steps forward she gets better.

F. W.

Ans.—She has laminitis (founder). Remove her shoes, put her in a box stall, and keep hot poultices to her feet until the soreness disappears. As she is in foal it would be unsafe to purge her. As the trouble has become somewhat chronic by this time, recovery will be slow. When you get her shod again, use bar shoes with good frog pressure.

ERUPTIVE OEDEMA.

Gelding that has stringhalt swelled in hind legs and broke out in one fetlock. The swelling has extended along his belly and broke out behind the elbow. Both places discharge a yellowish matter.

T. C. T.

Ans.—The stringhalt has no connection with the recent trouble. Purge him with 8 drams aloes and 2 drams ginger. Follow up with 2 ozs. Fowler's solution of arsenic twice daily every alternate week. Dress the eruptions with a five-per-cent. solution of carbolic acid three times daily. Feed lightly and give regular exercise. You will find it a very stubborn case.

RINGWORM-LICE.

1. What causes ringworm in cattle? Can they be fed to prevent it?
2. Why are cattle kept in warm stables nearly always troubled with lice in winter time, while they are usually free in warm weather? Can they be fed to prevent lice?

W. J. H.

Ans.—1. Ringworm is caused by a vegetable parasite, which is easily conveyed from animal to animal, and causes the disease. Nothing in the way of prevention or cure can be done by feeding. All affected should be isolated, and no communication whatever be allowed between them and the healthy. It would be better to move the sound cattle to healthy quarters, as the parasite adheres to stalls, floors, pails, etc., and is always ready to attack a fresh victim. Moisten the scales with sweet oil, remove them, and then dress with tincture of iodine daily until cured. Disinfect the premises by sweeping thoroughly and then giving a thorough coat of hot lime wash, with five-per-cent. carbolic acid. Disinfect all pails, clothing, etc., that has been exposed. If treatment and disinfection be thorough there will be no further trouble.

2. Heat and semi-darkness favor the multiplication of lice, but you are wrong in saying nearly all cattle well housed become infected. Lice will not develop spontaneously in any temperature, there must be a few for a start. When cattle shed their hair in the spring a great number of the lice drop off, but a few remain, and they reproduce, and in the fall, when the cattle are stabled, they breed quickly. Dress affected cattle with a four-per-cent. solution of Zenobium twice weekly until all lice are destroyed, then disinfect stable as in question 1, and you will have no further trouble.

How Is Your Cold?

Every place you go you hear the same question asked.

Do you know that there is nothing so dangerous as a neglected cold?
