STEEL CUT BY AIR

Experiment to Show the Speed With Which the Work Can be Done. "Diamond cut diamond," but steel cut with air. The new and ingenious method of rapidly cutting through iron or steel plate is based upon the fact that when iron at a high temperature is acted upon by a fine jet of oxygen the resulting iron oxide is more fusible than the iron itself and passing away exposes a fresh surface of the metal to the attack of the gas so that a cut is produced along the line of action. In the early attempts to utilize this method in practice the metal was first heated to the required temperature in an oxy-acetylene flame and then subjected to the action of the oxygen jet. Now, however, the heating and oxidation are done at the same time and the resulting cut is much sharper. In one form of apparatus used for this process the metal is heated by means of an oxy-acetylene flame from the centre of which issues a jet of oxygen. In illustration of the speed of the new process L. Guillet in ten minutes cut in two an armor plate 6 1/4 inches thick and 3 1/4 feet in length. Manholes were cut in plates 3/4 to 1 1/8 inches deep was cut by the oxygen process in seven minutes, whereas with a pneumatic chisel a groove of about the same length but only a quarter as deep took an hour to cut. The new method has also given satisfactory results in the rapid removal of the heads of rivets where plating has to be separated, only a few seconds' treatment being needed for fusing off the head of a rivet 7/8 inch thick. With regard to the effect of the oxygen upon the metal adjoining the cut experiments have shown that the depression is but slight.—From the Chicago Tribune.

New Haven, Ct., March 11.—In the common pleas court this afternoon, Frank J. McGee, of Worcester, Mass., New England organizer of the National Moulder's Union, was sentenced to a year in jail. AMONG THE JEWS

It is not generally known that the Chief Rabbi of Turkey, Rabbi Nahum, is a native of Magnessia, and that he is only 36 years of age. He is probably the youngest man ever elected to such responsible office when grey and venerable with age. The movement in favor of the return of the Jews to Spain seems to be growing in favor in that country. An orthodox Jewish charitable society in Philadelphia has established a restaurant where needy persons of Jewish faith may obtain a meal for six cents. The meals are three courses, including meats. Those lacking of the movement explained that while the meals are to be served only to the poor of their people, they insist on a small payment in order that those who get the six-cent meal will not feel that they are accepting alms.

Herman Jadowlker, a tenor of the court opera of Karlsruhe, is a new star in German opera. Jadowlker, who is a native of Riga, came as a young man to Vienna, sang in the choir of the synagogue, and was, with the assistance of some kind people, trained for the opera. There is a Jewish congregation at Yokohama, known as the Jews have not penetrated Japan—except as tourists. Dr. Soshana Buchin, a prominent Zionist worker in Palestine, arrived in New York on a unique mission. She is representative of a committee organized in Palestine, known as the Selah. The committee has determined to organize an appeal to the Jewish people, asking them to petition the Jewish Colonization Association to divert its capital to Palestine, where it should take up industries and colonization on a large scale. The Turkish Chamber of Deputies has under consideration a bill presented by the Minister for War, which aims at admitting non-Muslims into the army. From next May, all male Jews of the age of twenty-one will be called upon to serve. King Edward has just issued orders that all soldiers of the Jewish religion were in future to be allowed a leave of absence for Passover, Pentecost, New Year and Tabernacles, in addition to the Day of Atonement. It is stated that King Edward has also in view an arrangement whereby Hebrew soldiers should have their meals separately cooked. Jews resident of Spring Valley, N. Y., have named a committee to see Governor Hughes and Secretary of State Keogh to request to co-religionists should be called to serve on juries. They claim that at present they are discriminated against. Rabbi Morris Rosenberg has resigned as Rabbi of the Beth Abraham Congregation, Bayonne, N. J., and accepted a call to Barrie, Ont. A bill has been proposed in the New York State Legislature regulating dance halls and dancing schools, particularly on the East Side. The bill has the support of many Jewish social workers. Emilie Ricalliss, of Hoboken, N. J., a Roman Catholic, has embraced Judaism in order to marry David Klein, of the same city. She has assumed the name of Ruth. A Hebrew Protective Association, at Holoken, N. J., has been organized with 150 charter members. It is expected that 500 will be enrolled at the next meeting, which takes place on March 5. The Finnish Senate has published a gas engine.

STIRLING DIVORCE. SCOTCH JUDGE GIVES THE WIFE A SCOLDING.

Mrs. Atherton is Pronounced "a Lady by Birth," Though Ostracized by Wrongdoing—Stirling Keeps Children—Losers to Appeal—Public Surprised.

Edinburgh, March 12.—Lord Guthrie, Judge of the Court of Sessions, gave judgment yesterday in the divorce suits of Capt. and Mrs. Stirling. He granted Capt. Stirling a divorce and denied Mrs. Stirling's suit.

The Court awarded Capt. Stirling the custody of the child. The counsel for Mrs. Stirling and Lord Northland announced their intention of appealing against the judgment. Lord Guthrie in delivering judgment made some scathing remarks on the conduct of the parties concerned. The evidence, he said, showed that they had led selfish and idle lives. The mental endowments of Mrs. Stirling and Mrs. Atherton could not be reckoned as very high. The only useful occupation the two could find on one Sunday seemed to consist in manœuvring each other's aunts.

In dealing with Mrs. Stirling's trip to America Lord Guthrie remarked that she had spent her time on the voyage to New York in playing bridge whist with a total stranger. With this whist stranger she flirted and even entertained an invitation to stay at his house. Her only letter to her husband was written with the purpose of making a selfish proposal for separation on the condition that she received an annual allowance of £750 ($8,750), after the breaking up of her home she saved no unselfishness in frequenting restaurants and theatres with the man on whose account she had separated from her husband.

In comparing the two women Lord Guthrie said: "Mrs. Atherton was a lady by birth and fitted to take a conspicuous place in society, but had been ostracized by her own wrongdoing. The other was unable by reason of her own incapacity to adopt or ape the manners of society, takes at first a conventional pursuit or adheres to its standards. Both women seemed to hold a poor opinion of their own sex."

Lord Guthrie continued: "Lord Northland looked a demurely, straightforward, sensible man, and if Mrs. Stirling resolved to fight the case it was part of the code of honor of such a man to stand by the woman and see her through. It is proved that declarations of love were made recently to each other by the married young man and that young married woman, meaning by 'love' that feeling between the sexes which in the absence of impediment leads to marriage. Thereafter frequent lengthy meetings took place between the two alone and without the knowledge of the woman's husband, beginning while she still resided with her husband and continuing after she had been forbidden to see Northland, and she knew she was being watched and she had abandoned her home. Neither Mrs. Stirling nor Lord Northland had been able to give any reasonable explanation of these meetings apart from their love."

Lord Northland visited to Mrs. Stirling's room at Amberley Cottage during regatta week was not consistent with innocence, and with regard to the charged incident at the Chesham street house there was doubt about improper having taken place. "The midnight visit
