Oscar Wilde's Lecture. TEWS OF THE ÆSTHETE ON HIS WANDER-INGS IN AMERICA.

delivered by Mr. Oscar Wilde, called "Impressions of America":—"Stating that he had very little useful information to give, he described his first experience of the interviewer, 'the literary pirate of the States,' who sprang on board in the midst of a storm off New York, and asked his opinion of America. Not having seen it, he found it easy to give an unbiased opinion, which was very favorable as far as it went. Now it was more difficult. The first thing that struck him on landing was the prosperity of the people and the absence of rags. He saw millions of chimney-pot hats, but no rags. The second thing was that everyone seemed to be in a hurry, and this made him think it could not be a country of great romance, for romance was difficult where it was a vital necessity to catch a train. The beautiful he found where the Americans had least striven for it, in their great bridges and their perfectly beautiful use of the electric light.

The New York Beautiful devotes an article of the sate of these sixty-ingures are, still sadder is the Intervious salder is the Intervious set of ligures are, still sadder is the Intervious set, stil delivered by Mr. Oscar Wilde, called

"The travelling, when one gets into a Pullman car, was the perfection of luxury, but had no more privacy than if one sat in an arm chair at the Hamilton street corner of Piccadilly. Boys ran up and down selling literature, good and bad, and everything one could eat or not eat, but what harrowed his feelings most acutely was to see a pirated copy of his own poems selling for ten cents. He explained to the boy that he got no profit out of this edition of his work, but the boy said he got some, and seemed to think that if 100,000 people pay each to the Messrs. Gurneys af ew dollars more for cooking, parlor and box stoves, than they would have paid without high taxes, and the Messrs. Gurneys are made wealther by this process, the country has gained by so much; whereas, in fact, the 100,000 purchasers have just parted with what the manufacturing company has pocketed. The many have lost what the one has gained. The money was of more consequence to them, and, we dare say, was in their hands serving quite as well the public interests; and there is this fact, beyond the question of gain, it rightfully belonged to them and was taken from them not in a fair and open under conditions extremely unfair. In order to appreciate its splendor and strength it was necessary to go under the order to appreciate its splendor and London Advertiser. strength it was necessary to go under the fall itself in a suit of yellow sealskin so ugly that he should never have consented to wear it, but that he was informed that to wear it, but that he was informed that a similar dress had been worn by the great artiste Mme. Sara Bernhardt.

"Of America itself the most beautiful part was the West, and California most of all, and the most depressing the alkali plains through which the train travelled for days, stopping pressionally at all.

for days, stopping occasionally at small stations, where what by some curious process of reasoning was called a meal was served. Here he met the Indians, was served. Here he met the Indians, who were very picturesque and charming as long as they wore their own clothes, and very ugly when they put on European dress. Their language struck him as resembling German metaphysis—very fine as long as it was not understood. When it was interpreted he generally found at to convey a request for haif a dollar or some tobacco. One of the great features of America was the advertiser, who decreased the most beautiful parts of the

O N. account of the Wringer Manufacturing Co's on to being able to form a new combination to keep up the prices (the old combination having expired Jan. 1, 1882), there has been a very keen competition since and the result is that we can sell wringers at less than it formerly cost to import them. Now is the time to buy, as a combination may be formed again at any time and prices advanced. Orders from the country promptly filled and chevred at the trains or boats without any charge for cartage or packing got one—it was stopped at the Custom se in New York. Their humor was, he thought, a sort of philosophy, and one thing he admired about the American journalist was that he could write about the price of wool without the price of wool without referring a Jason and the Golden Fleece. The le turer also referred to the distinguished actors of America, and concluded with Fort Hanoi, in Cochin China, bei with fifteen of his men, was executed the following day with the rest of the prison ers. The Paris Gaulois says that the un fortunate men suffered death from impale ment, a mode of death so cruel and re ould doubtless call down upon its infa

In Turkey, where this punishment was most frequently inflicted, assassins whose crimes were of an aggravated character were always condemned to die on the Saint Edme, in his Dietionaire de la Cultivated Strawberries this punishment is inflicted as follows:—

"The unfortunate man who is to suffer death by impalement is laid flat upon the ground, face downward. His hands are tied on his back, and one of the executied on his back, as a down on his back. nishment is inflicted as follows :tioner's assistants sits down on his back o that the victim cannot move. A second assistant holds the culprit's head firmly to the ground, and a third assistant seizes his legs, which he holds so that he cannot his legs, which he holds so that he cannot move them. The executioner now approaches with the instrument of death, a long stake or pole, which he pushes into the body from behind. The pole tapers almost to a point, but is rounded off somewhat at the end, so that it will not penetrate the entrails at once. The executioner pushes this pole into the flesh as far as he can with his hands, whereupon a fourth assistant drives it still further with fourth assistant drives it still further with a mallet. Now the pole, which has pene-trated deeply into the body of the doom-ed man, is set upright in the ground, and the victim is left to die upon it. The weight of the body presses it further down upon the stake every moment, and the point finally protrudes from the breast or side of the culprit. Some of those upon whom this horrible punishment has been 465 Bdls.
