NOVEL MACHINES.—ICE PRODUCED BY STEAM POWER, AND STEAM Colventers, Extosnov.—That ice can be produced by mechanical means many have heard, but that steam may be used as an auxiliary for the purpose will seem hardly cradible to anybody; and that steam itself, may be conjusted into snow by the aid of situam, is a phenomenon of which but, very few have heard. Yet these are facts, and are now being daily demonstrated at the Great Exhibition, in the Refreahments Room, adjoining the department of machinery; in motion. Mr. Thomas Masters, of the Royal Polytechnic Institution, Regent-street, the inventor of various ingenious machines for freezing, has adapted several of them for being put in acting by steam power; and he has now in operation daily in the Western Refreshments Room, an apparatus capable of freezing mentry 100 quarts of dessert ices can thus be obtained, and of a perfectly wincoth quality. The economy of time, labour, and expense thus citizen and the steam of the steam of

The Hespory and Apprequipt of the Barrie. The Sipe is one of the misst encient instruments of masic. It is mentioned as one of the misst encient instruments at Saul's interview with the prophets, 1983 years before the Thistian era, and is frequently alleded to is Scripture. It was also in use among the early Greeks by whom it was named Pievola. The Tibia, or pipe of the mercent Romans, which is to this day played by the itsalian peasant although of a ruder construction, bears a striking similized to the Scottish pipe. In early ages among the northern nations, the pipe was their familiar instrument? I music. In Wales, it was in use until it gave way to the more packs and voluptuous strains of the harp. The last noted piper belong to the Welch mountains was "Shon an Peopy." i. c. John the Piper. But in Scottend and the islest, the Pieb Mhor is of every remote autiquity, and from time immemorial has been esteemed sacred and almost defied, by means of sts being applied to a versatility of employments—speaking as it does a language, and exciting emotions, which none but the people themselves can fully appreciate or comprehend.

The shrill martial tone of the bagpipe, so dissonant to the southern ear, has simulated the warrior to the most heroic explosits, while by its soft and wailing strains it has suchued the rougher feelings of the sternesst mountaineer. It has melted the lion beart of the sorrowing clausmen as they bore the body of their chief to his long home, and has brought buck, after the "wpirth and departed," the virtueus deeds and patriotic achievements of the illustrious dead. Its shrighly tones have enhanced the hilarity of the festive board, "these twas merry in the hall." It has beguided the tedious hours of a winter's night in the solitary bothy on the mountain brow; and when "cauld winter's blast has coarsed to blaw," it has assembled on this green many a light heart and merry foot, who have responded to its strains in these graceful and invigorating evolutions by which the nerves of the old struct in advance of his companions, his aword in his sheath, with sheath with the weapon in his hand save the instrument whose martial strains have led to countless deeds of hardinood and glory. The piper had to rouse and alarm his clan when meanced with danger, to collect them when scattered, solace them with his lively music on their drazy march and in their mountain retrents, and to keep up, in times of peace, the memories of the departed glorious of their country, the better to prepare them for counting danger. When the system of classible was broken up by the civil wars, these hereditary hards were discarded from the retinue of a chief, and their patriagnish farms steep returned, by their lairles. The present state of excietly has rendered it unnecessary for highland gauteman to keep up that imposing retinue which formerly graced the castle of a chief, and added splembour to his progress abroad; but the piper still retains a becoming station in the establishment of landed proprietors, although he is no longer attended by his gillie to carry his crois use or knapancie, we his terman in respectful attendance to hold his piper when he finishes his term.

It is only on such occasions as when Her Majesty visits Caledonia that the piper is indispensable; and it is chiefly from the great encouragement held out by the frequent competitions of trials of skill, where the meat meritorious are handsomely rewarded, and similar national gatherings, that the agricus spicit of the Piob Mhor is effectually roused from its sinchers.

STANDING

Mr. Barker, of No. 5, Graham's Flace, Drypool, near Hall, and altered not his leg from the ago of eighteen until upwards of eighty, and although for many years to had sought the first advice in the country, nothing was found to care them. He very often suffered most excrueiating pain for long periods together, which incapacitated him from attending to his business. He had given up all hopes of genting a cure when at last the was persuaded to try Holloway's Fills and Commonty, which so did, and however wenderful it may appear, the leg owns the roughly healed by their means, and by continuing to use the Fills alone offer his leg, was well, be ions become in health so halo and hearty as now to he more active than must men of fifty.

Lima, 18th November, 1840.

One of the most emissive Surgeons in Lima (the Capital of Paru) had a child overed with Ringsourn for more than six years; in vain he exhausted all his art in his endeavours to effect a cure. Not succeeding, he considered among his brediren, the most celerated medicinal practitioners of the City, but nothing was found to do the child service. When he was permanded by Mr. Joseph F. Hagoe, the English Chemist and braggist, residing at 44, Calle de Fallacie, to try Holloway's Patls and Oistment, with a proportion of the Fills, the child was radically cured, to the arriprise of the whole medical profession.
