is, to say the least of it, very absurd. Farmers in general owe much to information contained in agricultural books and periodicals. The results of experiments made by men of wealth, whether successful, or unsuccessful, are reported in these publications, and cannot fail to be useful to every farmer who may read them, however skilful in his business. If, occasionally, a man nicating their ideas to an Agricultural pub-lication, which they might do without giv-fing their names. Information from such sources would put an end to all the objecef husbandry is defective, as it is for their advantage chiefly it is published and sent to all sections of the country. It must be manifest to every man, that a publication of this nature can have no other object than the general improvement of Canadian agriculture; and every man you speak to on the subject will admit how necessary and desirable it would be to effect such an object. One would imagine, under such circumstances, that there is not an intelligent man in the country that would rot be most anxious to support such an object, by one dollar annual subscription; but we know the fact to be otherwise, and more particularly with the agricultural Societies established for the improvement of agriculture, all of the subject of the improvement of agriculture, all of the subject of the improvement of agriculture, all of the subject of the subject will be used to a certain extent, it was not to be given when the disease did not exist. Farsuccessful, are reported in these publications, and cannot fail to be useful to every farmer who may read them, however skiful in his business. If, occasionally, a man who is a good farmer, happens to meet in a book, or periodical some statements that he knows or supposes to be incorrect, there is no danger that he will be led into error by them. The farmer who understands his business will know what is useful from what is not, and he must be an extraordinary man indeed, who will consider himself so perfect in the business, that the experience of all other farmers taken together would not be equal to his own, or capable of instructing or enlightening him on any point. It must certainly be a great loss to agriculture that farmers who know themselves to be perfect in the practice of every branch of husbandry, would not be so generous as to businesh, the which the same halfs a dozen as large as those on the table taken from one horse, micating their ideas to an Agricultural publication. many horses from indigestion and its conselication, which ther might do without give lication, which there might do without give lication, which there might do without give lication, which the might do without give lication and the lication in the substitution of the lication in the lication of the country. This expedition of the Mormons has some unalogy to that of the excider of the Israelites from Egypt. Illinois, and Missouri, and Iowa have been to the Mormons the land of bondage from which they have excaped, and in which their leaders and saints were shot down, in the way that we shot down "the mob," in Massacre Place, up-town. Now they promise to become a free, powerful, and prosperous people. They have a great deal of religion, and a great deal of cant. But cant is a very necessary thing in a rold climate. It keeps them warm.—New York Herald.

OVERFEEDING HORSES.

It is one thing to give the horse enough to eat and another to over feed him. A Scotch Journal contains a report of a conversation at a meeting of an Agricultural Society, on this subject.

4 Professor Dick said he had been induced to come forward to offer a few remarks on the consequences arising from injudicity on the consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to come forward to offer a few remarks on the consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to come forward to offer a few remarks on the consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to come forward to offer a few remarks on the consequences arising from injudicity on the consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to come forward to offer a few remarks on the consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to consequences, which, if made known subject to seed to consequences arising from injudicity and the country are really wonderful. It seems to be a sort of Holy Land on a large on the sound of the consequences, which, if made known subject to seems to be a sort of Holy Land on a large of his seems to be a sort of Holy Land on a large of his seems to be a sort of Holy Land, and the feedings. The horse was, by nature, always feedings. His stomach was small, and able the great features of the ancient Holy Land, but on a tremendously large scale. Brigably to contain small quantities at a time, and if it was gorged, disease was at once induced. He observed a gentleman, now in whole concern.
