Moral Qualities Rule the World.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Other virtues are in request in the field and workshop, but a certain degree of taste is not to be spared in those we sit with. I could better eat with one who did not respect the truth of the laws than with a sloven or unrepresentable person. Moral qualities rule the world, but at short distances the senses are despotic.—Emerson.

I was much interested to read the other day a newspaper statement that a suggestion had been made that a course in manners should be introduced into the Washington schools.

I wish the suggestion might become an accomplished fact, not only in Washington, but all over the country. I cannot understand why, when all the other sciences have received such full attention in our school curriculum, the social science—the science of living with other human beings—should be so totally neglected.

For what really bitter unhappiness the ignorance of the right fork to use, of the proper way to treat a finger bowl, or some such little thing, may cause.

What a cruel social stigma the wrong way of holding his fork or of the habit of crumpling his cracker in his soup may bring upon a man whose heart is really full of true courtesy.

We may rail at such conditions of judgment, but we surely must admit they exist.

We would never think of leaving the study of grammar out of our schools and yet the man or woman who makes a mistake in grammar will be far more readily forgiven than he who eats soup from the end of his spoon.

Emerson says something to the effect that it is much easier to forgive even a sin than an error in breeding, and so it seems to be.

Of course the obvious answer to this is that while a knowledge of manners is undoubtedly necessary to one's peace of mind, such knowledge should be obtained in the home.

Of course it should; but how often is it?

Again and again there come to me in my mail queries on little points of breeding from young men and women, who evidently have not been taught such things in the home.

And almost always the letters are well worded and well written, showing that the inquirers have had an otherwise good education.

I do not think any city could give its children a course which they would look back upon with more gratitude all their lives than one in manners.

It might of course be difficult to get the children's interest, but I think this might be done by conducting the lessons in a very practical fashion. That is the lesson on table manners might be illustrated by a table set for a course dinner, and the other lessons in similar fashion.

The instruction need not be so elaborate that few of the children would ever have a chance to put half of it into practice, but merely a comparatively few simple rules of breeding.

Those who already knew some of these things surely wouldn't be hurt, and those who didn't would undoubtedly be saved much embarrassment and actual unhappiness.

Perhaps this is all very foolish and visionary, but for the life of me I can't see why.

The Doc's Lullaby

"Hush, my babe," croons old Doc Wiley, as he walks the floor at night; "surely I esteem you highly, and would further your delight; I would join you in a frolic, cure you of your stomach ache, but there is no hope for colic that is fit for you to take. Listen to your daddy chirrup, and you'll soon improve. I warn: I can't give you soothing syrup that is loaded with morphine! Deadly dyes and acids, boric, alcohol by drugs defiled, constitute the paregoric you are yelling for my child. Cease, O cease your frenzied screaming! Parents in the bygone times doped their children, little dreaming that they thus committed crimes; infants always did kerfuffle mix rattled parents when they're cared, and those parents in their stomachs divers brands of poison secured. We know better, now, my darling, open are our eyes, I hope; so you'd better quit your snarling, for I will not give you dope. If a baby's (woman's) aching, it must ache until it quits; if in spasms he is striking, he must throw his little fits. Trust to 'Nature—she will cure you; she at last will bring you ease; and all dope, I do assure you, is more fierce than the disease. Therefore, pesty, quit your shrieking; I have pains all up my back, and my wayworn knees are creaking, and I just stepped on a tack."

Stowaways.

The stowaway find is as much in evidence this year as ever, and gangs of boys seem to take great delight in planning free health trips to the ice-fields in the different ships. Already not less than fifteen lads have taken passage in the few steamers that have sailed. Captains complain that stowaways are a source of annoyance to them. Whilst it is not unusual for them to torment and impede the work of sealers as well as causing much anxiety and uneasiness of mind to their parents.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfeet about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and age her face. This remedy became known to Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—oiled the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that age her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

Mrs. Huxman E. Purich, of 264 Bright Street, Sarnia, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctors with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after aged me for a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, if not removed, would result in cancer, and he said I must be operated on right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicine, and after using two bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I immediately felt a change, also used two boxes of 'Healing Suppositories' and eight boxes of 'Lotion Tablets' and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines for any female disease, for these medicines are all they are claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

Extraordinary Hoax at Strassburg

Another Kopenick Case.

While the Emperor William was on his way to Konigsberg, this morning, some enterprising jester succeeded in persuading the authorities at Strassburg that His Majesty, instead of going north-east, was coming south-west in order to inspect the garrison. According to telegrams from Strassburg, the authorities there received a telegram from Weissenburg saying that the Emperor had already reached that place, that he would arrive at Strassburg towards noon, and that the garrison was to turn out. The general in command gave the necessary instructions, and the troops marched out to one of the parade grounds. With them went the Governor of Strassburg, the Statthalter of Alcee-Lorraine, and even the Emperor's youngest son, Prince Joachim, who ought to have been attending lectures at the University. The town was hastily decorated with flags and filled with expectant crowds. By about 3 o'clock the authorities thought of telephoning to the Government offices at Weissenburg, and received the reply that nothing was known there of an Imperial visit or of a telegram to Strassburg.

LATER.

Confirmation has been received here to-night of the practical joke which will make Strassburg into a greater Kopenick. It seems that no telegram was really sent from Weissenburg, but that a retired paymaster at Strassburg, who, as he admits, had a talent for hot air, forged a telegram from Weissenburg, disguised himself as a telegraph messenger, and carried it to the Government offices at Strassburg. The telegram said that the Emperor was coming on from Weissenburg by motor car—a stroke of genius which allayed the petulance of the authorities for some hours. The retired paymaster was arrested to-night and readily confessed to his crime.

Heartless Parents.

A very sad case has come under the notice of the police authorities in which a boy of tender years has been the victim of cruel and outrageous treatment from his callous father and heartless step-mother. Ever since the child's mother died it is no uncommon occurrence for him to receive unmerciful beatings and frequently treated in a barbarous fashion so much so that hearing the pitiful moans of the little boy, neighbours interfered, and it was only after considerable time that the latter reported the matter to the police. Accordingly the head of that body investigated and learned the facts of the matter to be all too true. The mite referred to is not more than six years old, and on examination his little body was found to be marked fearfully. Arrangements have been effected for his admittance to an orphanage.
