LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 22.

A POLICY FOR THE PEOPLE.

For the first time, perhaps, in the history of Great Britain, the finance minister has presented to parliament a budget that recognizes essentially the common people. Confronted by a large deficit, and with the necessity for extra expenditures for imperial purposes, the Government will attempt to increase its revenue without burdening the poor and at the same time make large provisions for the welfare of the community. There has been no attempt to raise money by protecting large and wealthy interests, and placing a tax on consumers. There has been no pandering to the noisy section that waves burdens on the people.

The increased revenue that the Govthose who can afford to pay the most. The income tax is increased but it is increased on those whose income reaches $25,000 a year. The succession is only on the larger estates. Licensed property will pay a larger tax; but the holders of licenses to make and sell intoxicants, even of as mild a nature as beer, are rich enough to pay. And policy of Britain will levy a tax of 20 in a nutshell! per cent on the unearned increment The man whose property increases in value on account of circumstances over which he has no control, will now have to pay to the people, who have on the common people is the increased perimental farming, for the encouragement of agriculture, and for rural transportation.

Social reform will not be delayed, even though it be necessary to expend large sums for the improvement of the army and the navy. There will be labor exchanges and unemployment insurance. This latter especially means The baker man must pay for flour, and the beginning of a complete system of national insurance, which, properly managed, will build up a system that should relieve the workingman from the nightmare of sickness, unemployment, and old age.

Whether or not the vested and wealthy interests of Great Britain will be strong enough to hamper or retard doors. the democratic policy of the Governpresent majority in parliament will secure the adoption of the Government measures. How the next election may result none can say. But one thing is It has the most exalted nerve, certain-revolutions seldom go backward. Reforms, bitterly opposed at their inception, soon become part of These are the simple rules that lead the established order of things, and even when their opponents attain power they seldom venture to repeal the measures against which they fought. They come to Canada with no political designs. Before they came here they learned that our laws are well administered, that life, liberty, and property are safe, and that under the British flag people enjoy self-government in the fullest degree. They find political conditions here better than those existing in the United States, and are perfectly content in a land of boundless opportunities and perfect freedom. They bring with them no alien ideas and are prepared to accept the country as they find it. There is no desire on their part to employ their influence to annex the Dominion to the United States, and they are rapidly becoming impressed with the spirit of Canadianism. There is something in Canadian life that appeals to such men. BIG MONTREAL PLANT WIPED OUT BY FIRE

Canada Lead Works Completely Destroyed, Entailing Loss of $250,000.

Montreal, Que., May 22.—The Canada lead works of the James Robertson Company, Limited, William street, made a spectacular blaze this morning, when the extensive plant was completely destroyed, entailing a loss of approximately a quarter of a million dollars. It is understood, notwithstanding the high insurance premiums payable on such a dangerous plant, the company was well covered. It is sup-posed the blaze had its origin in the packing-room in the centre of plant, and spread to all sides before breaking through the windows on William street.
