DAMNING PROOF OF HELL'S ACTS OF MURDER.

He Gave His Capricious Pills to Girls of the Street, Who Went to Their Lodgings and Died—The Evidence of an Ottawa Man to Whom Nell Admitted Poisoning.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—This was the third day of the famous murder trial, and there was no diminution in the crowd in the court room. The case appears to have a peculiar fascination for the girls who belong to the class among which Nell found his victims, and many of them have been present each day.

The case was resumed to-day by the prosecution calling John Patrick Hayes, who testified that he became acquainted with Nell through his visiting the photographic establishment maintained by her at Westminster Bridge-road, of which firm Hayes was a member. Nell was very eccentric. A friendship sprang up between the two, and Hayes, who is now a well-to-do man, testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance. Hayes testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance. What Nell Told McCullough.

John William McCullough, No. 374 Slater-street, Ottawa, stated that he was a traveler for Messrs. J. & C. Co., grocers, Toronto. At the end of February and the beginning of March of the present year he was staying at Blanchard's Hotel, Quebec.

While there he made the acquaintance of Nell, who he described as a young woman of about 25 years of age, who had been married to a man named McCullough. He testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance. Hayes testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance.

After general conversation McCullough asked him if there was any reason why detectives should follow him. He replied that the only reason he knew was that he happened to have some improper photographs about him. He asked McCullough if he would be kind enough to ascertain why he was being watched. McCullough told him he would do so. Nell told McCullough that he had been to the Westminister Bridge-road, and that he had seen a woman who he described as a young woman of about 25 years of age, who had been married to a man named McCullough. He testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance. Hayes testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance.

Inspector Harvey of the criminal investigation department, Scotland Yard, was the next witness examined. He testified that he made the acquaintance of Nell early in May. The prisoner knew who and what he was. He told him he was a doctor of medicine, and had studied at St. Thomas' Hospital. He stated that he had been to Dublin, and had afterwards returned to America. He testified that he was very free with his money. By going out with Nell, Hayes learned the nature of his acquaintance. Hayes testified that he was very free with his money. IT WAS A GOODY COMPANY.

WOODBRIDGE'S GREAT AND GLORIOUS DAY.

Crowds Thronged Into the Little Town—The Lieutenant-Governor's Gracious Presence—All Went Merry as a Marriage Day—The Show and the Banquet—Congratulations Specified.

A merry crowd of what was estimated to be the two special trains to Woodbridge Fair yesterday. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick went out by the 12.30 train and found a large number of Toronto hand waiting to welcome them. A prancing four-horse turnout, with Matthew Evans, J. J. Cogrove, Dr. McConnell, Mr. Woods, George Crookall, John Pearson and other members of the Woodbridge Club, all in white hats, was also on hand. When they caught sight of the Lieutenant-Governor they sang the "God Save the Queen." The procession marched down street to the residence of Mr. Clarke Wallace, M.P., who had the privilege of entertaining the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick during the day. In a short time the procession formed and made its way to the Fair grounds, where a stand had been especially erected for the Lieut.-Governor to witness the crowd.

The Lieut.-Governor's Address.

He said: "I am very glad indeed to be here to-day at this celebrated Woodbridge Fair, and to see so many people enjoying themselves. I am always pleased to attend such a gathering, and to see the progress of the country. I believe that a great deal of good in the country. Agriculture has been in an oppressed condition owing to the operations of vast grants, and the consequent cost of producing wheat has been diminished. Farmers will have to turn their attention to dairying, and to the raising of stock. There is a great deal of profit in dairying if followed intelligently. The traveling dairies, the experiments made by the Local and Dominion Governments are all means of educating farmers as to the value of their land."

With regard to horses, I would remind you that the common horse has gone down in value, but a good carriage horse or first-class roadster will command a price never before heard of. Only last week a carriage horse, called "The Duke," was sold for $3000 in Toronto.

"It takes no ordinary man to be a farmer. He must be a veterinarian, a chemist, a machinist, and there is no branch of learning and skill that cannot be profitably employed on the farm. In fact, the time has passed when the wise method will bring up her clever son for a farmer and the dull one for a lawyer or doctor. He must be a man of all trades."

There were three hearty cheers for the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who spent the rest of the afternoon in attending the various exhibits in the main hall.

The Guests Entertained.

In the evening the directors of the society gave a banquet to about 200 guests, many of whom were from Toronto. The dinner was given at the Hotel de Ville, and was a most successful one. The guests were entertained by the ladies of the society, who were assisted by the staff of the hotel.

LE CARON THE SPY.

He Writes a Book Which His Former Friends Will Read with Interest.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The reminiscences of Dr. Le Caron, the spy for the British Government, who gained notoriety in 1889 by his disclosure in behalf of the Times before the Parliamt. Commission, have been made public.

He calls himself a fatalist, and says: "I never sought Fenianism; Fenianism rather came to me."

Writing to his father in regard to the projected Fenian invasion of Canada, he says he never supposed that one result of his father's important letters to the British Government would be that he would receive a commission as a British spy. He declares that when he and Gen. O'Neill were recruited at the White House at Washington by President Johnson the President told him that the espionage of the Fenians and was willing to do all in his power to assist the Fenian movement.

He describes the whole Fenian movement as a grand imposture, and says he got acquainted with every man of importance connected with the movement. He says he was in the hands of the Fenians, and that he was in the hands of the Fenians, and that he was in the hands of the Fenians.

A GREAT DAY FOR CHICAGO.

CROWDS GATHERED FOR THE DEDICATORY FUNCTIONS.

The City a Great Hive of Humanity Gathered From All Parts of the Country—A Reception at the Auditorium—Roman Catholic Dignitaries Received With Honors.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—A city filled with people, brilliant with lights, alive with the impulse of an anniversary which none so living will see again, is Chicago tonight. The inauguration of the World's Columbian exhibition festivities was marked to-night by a brilliant reception and ball in the great hall of the Auditorium. On behalf of the other patrons and of the patronesses of the ball, Major-Gen. Miles, Mayor Washburn, H. K. Fairbank, George M. Fullam and Marshall Field had invited to a reception tendered to the President, Vice-President and ex-President of the United States, the representatives of foreign Governments, Governors of states and territories, and other distinguished guests. Thousands of electric lamps were reflected in the lake from the towering buildings, and the city was a sea of light. The reception was held in the Auditorium, which was filled to capacity. The President and Vice-President were seated on the stage, and the other guests were seated in the boxes. The music was furnished by the orchestra, and the dancing was done by the couples who had been invited to the ball.

CABLED FROM LONDON.

Further English Comment on Mr. Daly's Appointment.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—The Star to-night contains the following from London: "The selection of Thomas Mayne Daly as Dominion Minister for the British Islands is the hope here that Canada will at last adopt a thorough, vigorous immigration policy. The Canadian Gazette says that not so much more money as method is wanted, and urges that better arrangements be made for the reception of settlers in the Northwest. It also suggests that the Dominion adopt some system of prepaid passages. The Chronicle expects that Mr. Daly will review the whole immigration question in the light of western opinion, and will give a diversion of settlers from the United States."

SIR JOHN ABBOTT, THE CANADIAN PREMIER.

Sir John Abbott, the Canadian Premier, and George E. Foster, Dominion Minister of Finance, began work to-day at the Colonial Office. They desire to go over several pending questions with the British Ministers, and will especially discuss the difficulties in the way of the full adoption of the suggestion of the Canadian House of Commons regarding closer diplomatic relations with foreign nations.
